TAX LAW IS UPHELD BY COURT

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The United States Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the corporation on tax law. The decision was read by Justice Day.

The decision, which was unanimous, was sweeping in detail, every objection being overruled. It held that the corporation tax is not a direct tax on personal or real property of corporations, but that it is purely an excise tax, levied by authority of Congress on the corporations for the right of doing business, the same as a revenue tax is levied on liquor dealers.

The tax is held not to be an income tax, but an excise tax and, the opinion states, falls clearly within the provisions and authority of Congress. The opinion was also that the tax is not a direct tax on shareholders, thus overthrowing the chief claims of its foes.

Broad Power of Taxation.

The decision holds, as regards corporations doing an interstate business, that the United States has a right to levy the 1 per cent tax on those, and can tax all business in a State except internal functions of state government itself.

As regards the excise tax, said Justice Day, only one requirement is made by the constitution—that is geographic uniformity. As this 1 per cent tax is levied on all corporations in the United States it complies with this requirement, and is clearly constitutional.

"The Constitution gives the power to Congress to select the subjects of all excise tax without any argument. That this is a tax on frachise rights, upon cap italisation or upon stocks of a corporation is erroneous.

"It [illegible] rely a tax," declared Judge Day, "on the privilege of doing business, not upon the property of the corporations. It is also claimed that thels is simply another way of taxing non-taxable property, such as certain forms of bonds, but this is not true in any sense in regard to the corporation tax. The right of the government to establish an excise tax cannot be questioned."

It was as an adjunct to the Payne-Aldrich tariff law that the corporation tax came into existence. The standpatters and the high protectionists in Congress flung it as a sop to the people in the hope that the violent clamor against the new tariff might at least temporarily be halted. In this spirit it was enacted into law and Senator Aldrich frankly stated in the course of a debate in the Senate that he expected it would be repealed inside of three years.

A Good Revenue Producer.

Many of the reactionary senators voted for it, because they were confident it would be declared unconstitutional when the corporations started litigation over it.

As a revenue producer the corporation tax has been a success. It has added approximately $25,000,000 yearly to the income of the Internal Revenue office. The treasury was allowed to retain this amount, subject to the decision of the Supreme Court.

The first suit to test the constitutionality of the tax was brought in the Federal District Court of Vermont, January 15, 1910. It was brought by Stella P. Flint, a stockholder in the Stone-Tracey Company, to restrain the company from making returns on its business to the United States Treasury, as required by the corporation law.

Corporations Appeal.

In the first legal skirmish the governmen won a decisive victory, as the constitutionality of the law was sustained. At the same time exactly similar cases, eighteen in number, were brought in the Federal Courts in various States, and the corporations lost in every case. They were all appealed to the United States Supreme Court. These cases were argued March 17, 18, 1910, and reargued January 17, 18, 19, 1911.

Briefly, the government argument was that the corporation tax is not a direct tax upon real or personal property of corporations. If it were it would be unconstitutional. It is an excise tax, imposed upon the "right of carrying on or doing business" by the corporations. From this point of view the measure is not an income tax, which has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The government also contends that it is not a direct tax on the shares of stockholders or on the income from shares, and that as a true excise tax it is uniform under the powers of the Constitution.

REPORT KING AGREES TO CREATION OF PEERS

LONDON, March 13.—That King George has consented to the creation of 500 new peers, in order to pass the veto bill in the upper house of Parliament, is the declaration published to-day in the Evening Times. The only condition which the King insists upon is that the government guarantee the selection of men of unblemished character and sufficiently wealthy to uphold the dignity of the peers.

EXPERTS FOR FOSS AT WORK

Experts representing Governor Foss were turned loose to-day on the several State departments, institutions and commissions. Revelations of a startling nature are expected.

"Business management" and "efficiency" are the things which the Governor has told these experts he wants chiefly investigated. Bookkeeping methods and accounts are not to have any time wasted on them, he says. He considers these things trivial compared with "business management" and "efficiency."

Harvey S. Chase, who did a great deal of work for the Boston Finance Commission, will have charge of the financial probing.

The investigation is peculiarly a Foss investigation. It is of the same kind that has been made in every business corporation with which the Governor, before his inauguration, was identified. It is an investigation for the benefit of stockholders—who, in this case, are the taxpayers of the Commonwealth. The Governor wants the taxpayers to know whether or not they are getting their money's worth.

To Head Off Waste.

From persons who have talked over the situation with the Governor it was made known to-day that he is satisfied that there have been waste and extravagance in the conduct of various departments and institutions. It was made known also that the official investigation, which began to-day, has been preceded by an unofficial investigation of several departments and institutions by friends of the Governor—some of whom are connected with the departments investigated, but not the official heads.

There was surprise to-day when it became known that the Governor will pass over no departments of the State in this investigation. Even his own office, the Executive Department, will be investigated. The Judiciary Department and the Legislative Department will also be subjected to the eagle eye of the experts.

To Show No Favoritism.

The Governor let it be known to-day that the investigation will recognize no personal or political favorites. Any report showing a partisan or personal color will be dumped into the executive waste basket, the Governor says.

An official statement of the plans of Governor Foss in carrying out this new responsibility says that the Governor and the Finance Commission of his council called before them the heads of departments intending to secure information that would enable the Governor intelligently to recommend the necessary appropriations. After two weeks spent in examining the department heads, not a single fact was elicited other than that the department officials "stood pat" on their original estates.

WAR IS DECLARED AGAINST "INTERESTS"

WASHINGTON, March 13.—War against the "special interests" was proclaimed today by the National Progressive Republican League, which issued a statement containing an outline of the program approved by the insurgent wing of the Republican party and a report of work accomplished in behalf of the movement. It states that the program of State legislation of the league is intended to be a creed for "progressive governors, legislatures and organizations."

CARNEGIE TRUST CO. BEFORE GRAND JURY

NEW YORK, March 13.—The grand jury to-day began an investigation of the Carnegie Trust Company scandal. As a result of the confession made by Joseph G. Robin indictments will be handed down within a few days and it is reported that a city official will be among those named.

DEMANDS $10,000 FOR LOSS OF WIFE'S LOVE

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 13.—Silas Miller, a barber, wants $10,000 for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections, and has instituted suit for that amount against Arthur Schurman, a well known young business man of this city.

Apartments

The enormous circulation of the AMERICAN among strangers in Boston—who read it because of the features with which they have made friends in the HEARST papers in New York, Chicago, San Francisco or Los Angeles—is only one of the reasons why "APARTMENT" Ads in this paper secure such ready responses.

Many Apartment Owners in Brookline, the Newtons, Dorchester, Cambridge and other suburbs use the AMERICAN exclusively. The AMERICAN works all the time. Don't wait for Sunday!

SEEK TO INDICT BROKER

A special session of the grand jury of Suffolk county convened to-day at the county courthouse, and the first case taken up was that of Robert S. Brown, the Boston note broker, now under arrest in New York for the alleged forgery of the names of prominent Bostonians, among whom are George Otis Draper, a son of the late General William Draper.

When Brown was arrested in New York on Friday it was reported from there that he was willing to come back to Boston without formality, but the Boston authorities decided to present his case to the grand jury and have him held there as a fugitive from justice until an indictment warrant was obtained, should he be indicted.

District Attorney Pelletier was before the grand jury to-day in person. Among the witnesses who were admitted were Inspector Morris Wolf, Lawyer Clarence Eldridge, J. Colby Bassett and Charles H. Wooster. Wooster is a note broker who brought suits against Draper to recover on the notes which purport to be indorsed by him, but which he repudiates.

Hint Other Arrests.

A report was circulated in financial circles to-day that there might be other arrests in connection with the notes negotiated by Brown and the alleged forgeries which, it is said, will total $100,000.

Brown made thousands of dollars during his brief career, but it is said little remains to show for it. The house in which his wife and two children reside on Winthrop road, Brookline, is valued at $16,000. Mrs. Brown, who was Miss Margaret L. Bennett, holds the title at the present time, however. Brown also possesses property in Roxbury, having gone on the bond of a New York man named Helm some time ago, but this property is said to be covered by mortgages.

Brown paid practically all his bills by means of worthless checks, it is said, among those receiving them, besides local butchers and grocers, being the Edison Electric Illuminating Company and the Hood Milk Company.

Girl's Loss [illegible],000, Says Brother.

The fact that George Otis Draper was connected with the Southern Maine Steamship Company, of which Brown was treasurer, was the reason that Miss Annable Snow of Winthrop put money into the company, according to a statement made by her brother, Edward S. Snow of No. 59 Cottage avenue, Winthrop.

"In the first place, my sister only stands to lose $4,000, instead of $30,000, as has been stated," he said. "She put in between $6,000 and $7,000, but that has been cut down so that at present there is but $4,000 owing her.

"About a year ago a Mrs. Hattie Stevenson, with whom my sister was acquainted, and who worked for the Southern Maine Steamship Company, talked with her in regard to this company. She told her that Mr. Draper was one of those behind it, and my sister put in from $6,000 to $7,000 and received notes payable in from three to six months. When these fell due they were settled to a small degree and new ones issued for the remainder.

BROKERS' TRIAL IS RESUMED

After an entire morning of conference and argument between the lawyers in the trial of the four members of the brokerage firm of Sederquist, Barry & Co., charged with conspiracy and theft, Judge Jenney to-day excluded all evidence regarding the general methods of the firm's doing business and admitted only that in regard to the transactions specified in the indictment against them. In making his ruling Judge Jenney said:

"I am not going to admit evidence of other transactions than those specified in the indictment. After the evidence of the specified allegations is in then I may consider other evidence."

In making his argument for the admission of the evidence as to their general method of doing business, District-Attorney Webber said:

"The whole scheme of Sederquist, Barry & Company was nothing but a gamble proposition. They may argue that they only did what other firms are doing right along down on State street, but there is a question as to the methods of most firms on State street."

The session opened to-day with a conference between the lawyers as to what objections the defence offer to the admission of documentary evidence. This lasted an hour and a half. At the end of that time Judge Jenney admitted all of the books and stock sheets.

Elmer E. George, the former cashier of the firm, was then called and asked to point out a certain transaction in North [illegible]. The defence objected. They argue that the question was irrelevant. Judge [illegible] excused the jury and the argument as to the admission of general testimony followed.

BRAND WILL FIGHT DISPOSAL CONTRACT

City Councillor Frederick J. Brand came out to-day with a flat declaration that he will fight the letting of the proposed contract between the city and the Boston Disposal Company for the care of garbage and refuse. Mr. Brand declares that the city could dispose of its garbage at a saving of $200,000 a year over the price to be paid under the contract now before the city for renewal. Mr. Brand said to-day: "The amount that might be saved depends on the new Commissioner of Public Works. I believe the city should take the matter in charge and do its own removing and disposing."

VETERAN STREET CAR EMPLPOYE IS DEAD

William Elliot, who for fifty-one years was in the employ of the street railway companies, died at his home, No. 32 Marshall street, Somerville from old age. Had he lived two weeks more he would have been eighty-five years of age. He was pensioned by the Boston Elevated December 19, 1909. Funeral services will be held at the house this afternoon.

REBEL ATTACKS MET BY FIERCE RESISTANCE

Two Battles Raging To-day, with Reported Heavy Losses on Both Sides---U. S. Troops Massing on Frontier.

Two battles between Federals and Insurrectos are raging to-day near the northern border of Mexico, according to dispatches from that section. One of the clashes is at Agua Prieta, just across the boundary from Douglas, Ariz., and other at Ojinaga, south of Marfa, Texas.

SECOND DETERMINED ATTACK BY REBELS.

The fight at Agua Prieta is the second attempt of the rebels under General Blanco to take that strategic point from the Diaz soldiers. Blanco made the attempt yesterday with about 450 men, and was compelled to retreat by the 300 Federals. The total dead and wounded in this attack was placed at twenty-two on both sides.

Captain Johnson, in command of the Third cavalry at Douglas, received a telephone message to-day from Commissario Vasquez, of the Mexican Federal garrison, that the insurrecto forces had again marched upon the town. In this attack it was estimated that the rebels had more than 600 men.

Captain Johnson marshalled his men on the boundary line to prevent and help from leaving the American side. Hundreds of people gathered on the border, some going in automobiles, to watch the clash. American doctors stood ready to dash over, however, to help take care of the wounded as they did yesterday, if necessary.

The dispatch from Marfa, Tex., says that the Mexican regulars and rebels are fighting desperately at Ojinaga, and that there has been a heavy loss on both sides. General Luque commands the Federals and Colonel Sanchez the insurrectos.

Peace Terms Proposed.

From El Paso, Texas, came the news today that the revolutionary junta there had prepared terms of peace which they would propose to the Diaz government. The terms are that both sides quit fighting, that electoral commissioners be appointed by the Mexican government, the rebels and the United States to guarantee fair elections and that the rebels agree in the meantime not to molest the railroads, the government also agreeing not to use them for the carrying of troops.

Senor Limantour, Mexican Minister of Finance, in New York to-day laughed at this proposition and said emphatically that there would be no peace until the rebels laid down their arms without conditions.

The cruiser Washington sailed to-day from Portsmouth, N. H., for New York, where she will take on supplies and then proceed to join the squadron in the waters off the eastern coast of Mexico.

The Prairie, with 700 marines aboard, reached Guantanamo, Cuba, to-day, according to a wireless dispatch received by the Navy Department at Washington.

General Duncan Transferred.

A dispatch from San Antonio to-day announced that General Joseph W. Duncan will be transferred from Fort Sam Houston to take personal direction of the American troops on the Mexican border. Army contractors were to-day ordered to load cars with provisions to be sent to the border. The Ninth and Eleventh Cavalry, negro regiments, will be sent to the border at Eagle Pass and Laredo, respectively, to reinforce the troops now doing patrol duty.

The revolutionary forces, it would appear, have gained ground in their extended campaign in the State of Sonora, but have suffered heavily in Chihuahua. The rebels are to-day in possession of the town of Navajoa, Sonora, but lost many of their best men, officers and soldiers of the foreign legion about Casas Grandes.

After capturing the town of Navajo the rebels burned all the bridges in the vicinity to check a reinforcement of the Federals who drew off after determining the overwhelming strength of the enemy.

A great deal of doubt exists as to the American dead and wounded about Casas Grandes. The junta at El Paso received word to-day that Captain R. F. Harrington, an American soldier of fortune, and Giuseppe Garibaldi, descendant of the Italian patriot, had only been wounded and not killed.

Famine in Chihuahua.

Famine reigns in Chihuahua, and the operations of the rebels under General Madero and General Blanco indicate that the insurrectos will try to starve the city into surrender.

General Orozco is said to be somewhere in the mountains near Chihuahua ready to attack the town upon orders from Madero. Famine conditions prevail in other cities in the interior of Chihuahua because of the interrupted railroad service. Supplies cannot be shipped either north or south.

The Mexican permanent commission of congress meets today in Mexico City to approve of the establishment of martial law and to take further action toward the extermination of the insurrectos. Rebels found interfering with the railroads or other government property will be shot.

With a living wall of American troops along the border, President Diaz is confident that the regiments of regulars which he will now hurl against the revolutionary forces will be able to crush the insurrectos. Other government officials, however, are not so sanguine.

The situation in Mexico City alone has been dangerous for some time, and it is feared that the sending of the main strength of the army to Northern Mexico will allow the revolutionists to spread the revolt into the capital. The southern states are in a condition bordering upon anarchy.

Diaz Has Heart Trouble.

The latest appearance of Diaz, in order to contradict rumors that his health is in precarious condition, has not served to clear the situation. The aged president is understood to be suffering from heart trouble and during his entire interview with newspaper men yesterday his son, Colonel Porfirio Diaz, Jr., was at his side every moment. The presidential palace is guarded night and day by picked troops of the army. President Diaz has been in fear of assassination for a year and more elaborate precautions are being taken now than ever before.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt made a visit to the camp at San Antonio today. Later he left for Dallas, Tex. Colonel Roosevelt rode a cavalry horse and was accompanied by Governor Colquitt and staff. On account of the rain yesterday the field was rather muddy. There was no review of troops.

After riding over the field the Colonel and his escort repaired to the headquarters of Major-General William H. Carter.

ELEVEN DEAD IN RAILWAY STRIKE

CHATTANOOGA, March 13.—With eleven men dead as a result of the strike of white firemen on the Queen and Crescent route of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad all traffic along the road from here north is suspended. The railroad officials hope to resume train service during the day, but only white firemen will be employed, as at every station north of here armed strike sympathizers search the engine cabs for negroes.

The engineers have served notice they will run no more trains with negro firemen and are also threatening to strike in sympathy. The machinists may also go out, as several members of their union have been discharged because they refused to man the engines. The railroad has been warned that bridges will be dynamited if more negroes are employed.

Three white men are among the dead. The rest are negroes, only three of whom have thus far been identified. The white men killed are:

James Carl, white, detective, shot at Glen Mary, Ky., while guarding a negro fireman.

H. M. Holloway, white, deputy sheriff, shot from ambush at Stearns, Ky.

J. C. Lovett, white, deputy sheriff, assassinated while guarding coal chutes at Stearns, Ky.

J. P. DRISCOLL, Sole Proprietor, 104 Summer St., opens to-day with full line of Holland Wine Co. system.—Advt.

GRAND JURY IS IN SESSION

After the special session of the Suffolk County Grand Jury had been in session about an hour to-day, Inspector Morris Wolf appeared in the corridor and took inside seven or eight men as witnesses.

Among the men who went into the grand jury room was John L. Sullivan, who was indicted and arrested on the charge that he and former Senator Frank J. Linehan conspired to rob the city in connection with lumber contracts.

Sullivan was held in $1,500 bail. Linehan is now at liberty under $5,000 bail. Former Senator James H. Vahey, who acted as counsel for Linehan, was at the court house to-day, but declined to discuss his business there.

Following Sullivan into the grand jury room was E. G. Pond, a lumber dealer of Boston and Charles Parker, his foreman. Pond is one of the men from which, it is claimed, Linehan and Sullivan bought lumber in the name of a city official.

Two young women, handsomely dressed, were taken into the secret room later. One of them was Mrs. Iona E. C. Myrick, whose husband was a stock broker. Mrs. Myrick has a typewriting establishment in a downtown street on the same floor that was formerly occupied by Linehan when he did a contracting business. It is said that Mrs. Myrick did work for Linehan at times.

The other young woman declined to tell anything about herself. Each of the women witnesses were in the grand jury room about twenty minutes.

DOCTOR QUIZZED IN DEATH TRIAL

PLYMOUTH, March 13.—Dr. E. Winfield Egan, the Buzzards Bay physician who attended Joseph Helleur, for whose death Charles P. Fernald is now being tried on a charge of manslaughter, to-day declared that Helleur's death was no surprise to him.

The admission came from Dr. Egan during his cross-examination by Attorney H. H. Baker. Mr. Baker made the doctor tell in detail of his visits to Helleur and the treatment he prescribed. Then he asked:

"Doctor, were you surprised that Helleur died after your treatment of him?"

"No," replied the doctor.

Dr. Egan was the first witness to-day. His direct examination was concluded after a few questions, he having been on the stand last week.

Judge Is Belated.

Court did not resume until after 11 o'clock. Judge Quinn did not arrive until then. The train on which he came to Plymouth was delayed at Atlantic and did not get to Plymouth until 11 o'clock.

Assistant District Attorney Frederick Katzmann of Hyde Park, who had been ill for a week or more with the grippe, was present in court to-day. The greater part of the day will be taken up with medical testimony. The government has several experts and the defence just as many.

To-morrow will mark the anniversary of the alleged crime. Helleur is claimed to have been struck down March 14 of last year. He died six days later. The government charges that death resulted from a wound on the head, inflicted by a billiard cue in the hands of Fernald, who runs a poolroom and bowling alley at Onset Bay. The present case is Judge Quinn's first criminal trial.

Kisses Wife and Babies.

Fernald was brought into the court room to-day by Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon of Plymouth County. The prisoner, who weighs about 200 pounds, was dressed in a gray suit and stand up collar. He is said to be one of the best appearing men ever to be placed on trial here on a criminal charge.

An affecting scene took place when Fernald reached the outer door to the court room. In the corridor stood his wife and their three children, Margaret, eighteen, Mary, fourteen, and Chester, twelve. Husband and wife embraced. The father's greeting was also an affectionate one for his children. He kissed all three then turned and entered the court room.

NEW YORK, March 13.—A strike of 15,000 men is threatened as a result of the struggle now on between 800 drivers and helpers and the Adams Express Company. This would involve all employes of the "Big Five" express companies in New York, New Jersey and Hoboken.

PASTOR PLEADS FOR DEFAULTER

PITTSFIELD, March 13.—Rev. Payson B. Pierce, pastor of the South Congregational Church, has issued a letter to the public pleading that Arthur E. Feeley, the defaulting former clerk of the Third National Bank, be given a chance. Mr. Pierce says: "Arthur Feeley yesterday in the estimation of the public, was an excellent young man—kind, obliging, polite and capable. To-day, because he bent under the strain of a great temptation, no pen is lifted in his behalf, no voice speaks in his defence. To-day he needs a friend as never before. To-day he has all the good qualities that were so estimable and attractive in him yesterday. He is the same young man, only bruised and bleeding from his bitter conflict with the world. He is not insensible to the wrong he has done. He is not defiant. His heart is broken. He has confessed his sin like a man. He has become his own detective and discovered against himself that which the bank could not find and knew not of.

"He and his friends have made complete restitution. His wife has been true to him and has done a noble thing. She has helped to pay the debt with that token of love which is the dearest thing a young woman ever receives from the young man she loves. She is loyal to him now and will remain so, despite what gossips may say. She believes in him. His father and mother and sisters believe in him. His pastor has confidence in him. All who know him deepest and best believe he has the qualities of noble and useful manhood and will yet fill a man's place in the world if only he is encouraged and treated like a man.

"I plead with the people of Pittsfield and the press of Pittsfield to give him a chance. Something more than a few dollars is at stake. Manhood and destiny hang in the balance. A brother is in trouble and in need. Remembering the example of Jesus Christ, we shall not condemn him, but rather open to him gateways of opportunity and with words of hopefulness and assurance help him on his way. We shall love him, but not his guilt, and only who 'is without sin among us' will cast a stone."

Backache in most cases is kidney ache and usually accompanied by irregularities of the urine. To remove the pain and weakness you must cure the kidneys. Do so with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George L. Nott, 99 North Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells and frequently had to grasp something to keep from falling. My sight was affected and spots often appeared before me. My back also caused me great suffering. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills I began their use, and after I had taken the contents of five boxes I was permanently cured."

INVALID GIRL SAVED AT FIRE

Four families were out in their night clothes early this morning and an invalid, a nine-year-old girl, was rescued during a fire in the third floor of the four-tenement block at No. 43 Falmouth street, owned by Julley & Co.

Robert C. Hollins, a lodger in the house, discovered the blaze and, running down stairs, notified Patrolman Cumerford of Station 16, and turned in an alarm. Cumerford called to Patrolmen Brett and Treanor, nearby, and the three entered the burning building and succeeded in rousing all the tenants.

On the first floor lived Mrs. Robert Light; on the second, C. H. Bourne and family; on the third, Albert Botaun and family of three children; on the fourth, Mrs. F. E. Corkens. These were all hurried down stairs and into the street without having time to dress. The patrolmen carried out nine-year-old Victoria Botaun, who was ill. The cause of the fire is unknown.

PROTEST BY REV. DR. VAN ALLEN

The Rev. William Harman Van Allen rector of the Church of the Advent, has urged his parishioners to withdraw from the Sunday School Union as the result of a lecture to Sunday school teachers, members of the union, by a member of the Diocesan Board of Education, in which the virgin birth of Christ is mentioned "as one of those uncertain matters about which the church has not finally spoken."

The decision of Dr. Van Allen to ask his parish to withdraw from the Sunday School Union has caused widespread discussion among the Episcopal chur[illegible]ders of Greater Boston. The announcement came in the regular "Rector's Weekly Message," which Dr. Van Allen's parishioners receive every Sunday morning. In the Weekly Message delivered yesterday morning Dr. Van Allen says:

An Essential Doctrine.

"One of the essential doctrines of the Christian religion is that which declares our Lord to have been 'born of the Virgin Mary.' Denial of this, or doubt of it, tends always to denial of His eternal existence as the word which was in the beginning with God, and which is God, denial, i. e., of His Godhead. Yet such denial has not been unknown heretofore in Massachusetts among churchmen, alas! And it found apologists. I speak of this now because of a recent occurrence in connection with the diocesan board of education. An intelligent person present affirms that a member of that body, in a lecture delivered officially to Sunday School teachers, mentioned the Virgin birth as one of those uncertain matters about which the church has not finally spoken.

Withdraws from Union.

"I sought for official information as to this alleged heretical utterance; knowing how often speakers are misquoted and misrepresented; I asked whether the lecturer used such language, or, if memory failed, what language she would use in setting forth her own belief and teaching on that point.

"But all such information was refused; and I was told the speaker was misunderstood! It seems clear to me that until we have some guarantee against false teaching given officially in the name of the board of education it is our duty to withhold support from it as not truly representing the church. Therefore, so far as I may, I decline further connection with the Sunday School Union; and I advise against voluntary subscriptions toward the $334.06 which this parish is asked to give for its support in 1910-11."

VALUELESS AFTER MARCH 27, 1911.

GIVE STANDING IN 5 DISTRICTS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The Contest Editor will publish next Sunday, March 19, the first list of candidates' standing, by districts, in Districts Three, Four, Five, Six and Seven.

The candidates' standing in Districts One and Two was printed yesterday. Owing to lack of room—for Districts One and Two required a double page—it was impossible to print the standing for all seven districts in one issue.

In addition to printing the standing for Districts One and Two the Contest Editor also printed yesterday the name of the leader in the open race for the capital prize, the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

This leader for the capital prize is Charles W. Weaver. He lives at No. 32 Congress street, Portsmouth, N. H., which is in District Five.

The Contest Editor congratulates Mr. Weaver and the district leaders in Districts One and Two upon their good work. The same applies, too, to the district leaders in the other five districts, when they are announced next Sunday.

If your name does not appear well up in these district lists, don't be discouraged. Plunge in and work all the harder. Round up every vote you can, especially votes BY SUBSCRIPTION. The latter method is by far the fastest way to pile up your vote-standing.

The leaders are cautioned, too, not to slack up work just because they are in the van now. Their positions can be held only by continuous vote-getting. If they let up, some other candidate will pass them.

This contest is a fair field and no favor. Votes win. It's like any city, State or national campaign. You can't tell who wins till the votes are in. Apparent leaders are frequently beaten at the finish through their own confidence.

A candidate wishes to know if he can find out just how many votes he has to his credit. Certainly he can. Any candidate who wishes to ascertain his own standing can do so. The Contest Editor will be glad to show any candidate his exact vote total at any time.

The Contest is now nearing the half-way mark. On March 31, the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest, with its 1,000 prizes, will be half over. It will have run two and one-half months by the end of March and will have two and one-half months more to go.

Candidates need to bear in mind the fast flight of Time. Also that this very month of March is one of the most favorable of all for vote-getting.

The double March offer is the reason. This double offer has two parts. The first feature of it is the special vote bonus of 5,000 votes which is given to each candidate for each and every lot of ten subscriptions turned in between March 1 and March 31, inclusive.

The second part of the double March offer is a prize of a 1911 automobile runabout, to be given to the candidate who polls the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION during March.

The vote bonus part of the March offer is a wonder for piling up voting strength for candidates. The regular vote credit on subscriptions is a fast vote-booster. But, when a candidate is given an extra vote bonus of 5,000 votes for each lot of ten subscriptions which he or she turns in, the vote credit piles up rapidly.

This double March offer will last only up to and including March 31. There are eighteen days more left for candidates to take advantage of it.

Any candidate can see, of course, that the more work done in March, the higher the standing of a candidate is made for the main contest.

The 1911 automobile runabout in the March offer will be awarded to the candidate polling the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION in March.

But the March work of all candidates, no matter who wins the runabout, goes to swell their standing in the main contest just the same.

The lesson is obvious—make March your big month.

THREE BURNED TO DEATH.

TAPPED 8 TIMES

The following report in an extreme case of chronic Bright's Disease will interest physicians due to the fact that tapping has heretofore invariably attended fatal terminations. Under the new emollient treatment tapping does not prevent recovery.

Patient—six years old—the young son of A. E. Dean, of 1723 Ninth Ave., Oakland, Cal.

Chronic Bright's. Dropsy that had resisted all efforts was continually increasing. The family physician gave no hope and said the end was near.

At this critical moment the treatment was changed to Fulton's Renal Compound, the physician aiding it by holding up the heart and strengthening the little patient against collapse.

Case very stubborn—dropsy was so oppressive that the patient had to be tapped eight times. But as the tappings became further apart the albumen began to decline, diuresis increased, and the patient made a slow but steady recovery, and is now going to the public school in Oakland.

The new emollient treatment for Bright's and chronic kidney disease (Fulton's Renal Compound) shows an efficiency in about 87 per cent. of these hitherto incurable and fatal diseases. It can be had in Boston from Jaynes Drug Co., 50 Washington St.

We desire to hear from and advise with patients not noting improvement by the third week. Literature mailed free. John J. Fulton Co., 645 Battery St., San Francisco, Cal. We invite correspondence with physicians who have obstinate cases.

NEW PROBE FOR LYMAN SCHOOL

An investigation into the alleged deal by which the trustees of the Lyman School for Boys at Westboro were "whitewashed" by the legislative committee appointed to probe the death of John Newman, one of the inmates, is to be asked. Wholesale dismissals of officials and attendants by Superintendent Elmer E. Coffeen are the cause.

The Newman boy was found dead and it was reported he had hanged himself. Circumstances that apparently tended to show his death was not self-inflicted resulted in an investigation which ended, it is charged, by an agreement between the investigating committee and the trustees that they would quash the investigating effort if the trustees would dismiss certain officers.

Joseph Farrell of Westboro, for several years an employe at the school, is at the head of the movement for another probe. His action is due to the fact that Walter M. Day, assistant superintendent of the institution for twenty years, has been asked to hand in his resignation and has refused to do so. Day was asked to hand in his resignation by March 18, but he says he will not do it, and his friends demand the removal of Superintendent Coffeen and the board of trustees.

Mr. Farrell says: "Over 90 per cent. of the appointed officers are not in harmony with the superintendent. Lately four of the most valuable officers that have been at the institution have been dismissed—James E. Crowell of Westboro, instructor of cabinet making; Mrs. Alice Skillings, matron of the school, and Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Gerrish, master and matron of Hillside Cottage.

NOTED JESUIT DIES SUDDENLY

BALTIMORE, March 13.—The Rev. F. X. Brady, noted Jesuit priest and president of Loyola College, was found dead in bed this morning. The cause of death was heart failure.

Father Brady was well known in Boston. Three years ago he conducted the annual retreat at Boston College for the Catholic Alumni Association. He was a man of fine physique and an eloquent preacher. He endeared himself to the men who attended the retreat by the earnestness of his manner and the holiness of his minstrations.

His lectures produced a most edifying effect on the thousand or more men, most of them professional and business men, who attended the services morning and evening.

The dead priest was born in Pennsylvania, March 29, 1857. He entered the Jesuit Society July 21, 1873, at Frederick, Md. He made his studies at Woodstock, Md. After a period of teaching in Jersey City he was ordained in 1888. He was for several years editor of the Messenger, which position he relinquished when ordered to go to Loyola College, Baltimore. He filled here the position of prefect of studies and of rector of a church. When Father W. G. Read-Mullan fell sick Father Brady took his place as president of Loyola, and on Father Mullan's death he was continued in that office, which he held since.

Last year Father Brady conducted the retreat for the Boston clergy at Brighton Seminary.

78 YEARS OLD AND ONCE MORE FATHER

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., March 13.—David Keim, a Mennonite bishop known throughout the mountain country, is the father of a boy who was born to-day. Bishop Keim is seventy-eight years old. His wife is thirty-eight, and during their eight years of married life there were no children until to-day. Mr. Keim, hale and hearty, is as happy over the arrival of his latest child as he was over the first who came so many years ago that he is now a grandfather. Bishop Keim, probably the oldest father in the United States, has grown children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, all by a former marriage.

HELD IN $1,000 FOR ASSAULT WITH GUN

Clements Wudutis was fined $25 for carrying a gun by Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court to-day and also held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury on the charge of assaulting James Sullivan with a loaded revolver. A charge of drunkenness was placed on file. Wudutis lives at No. 4 B street and works in a sugar refinery on Granite street. After he left a Dorchester avenue saloon, where he said somebody had taken $2 out of his pocket, Wudutis met Sullivan on the street, and when the latter asked him for a match drew a revolver, and, it is claimed, opened fire. A random bullet hit James Lennon in the sole of a shoe, but did no harm. Policeman Lampe took Wudutis to the Broadway station after an angry crowd swarmed around the prisoner.

MYSTERY GIRL HELD IN LYNN

Lillian Davis, giving her address as Upton street, Boston, and Henry P. Mead of Prospect street, Lynn, were held in $100 in the Lynn Police Court to-day on a mutual charge of assault for a further hearing to-morrow. Both pleaded not guilty, and Deputy Chief of Police Bartlett asked the court to hold the case over until to-morrow that an investigation might be made by the Boston police.

Mead said that he had been drinking and that he met the woman on Bulfinch street, Boston, after she had been in some sort of trouble.

He said he called a cab, paid the cabby $7 to drive him and his unknown friend to Lynn, but could not explain why she tried to commit suicide. He was positive that she had no money nor diamonds when he met her.

Mead was held on suspicion and the story of the affair was told to the Boston police.

Miss Davis was not sure to-day that she had $26 and two diamond rings before she met Mead.

She said to the police that she had been drugged in Boston and that she remembered nothing after taking a few drinks in a palm garden. She said she had been robbed of a handbag in which were $26 and that two diamond rings had been taken from her fingers.

Lillian was unable to explain how or why her clothes were torn from her, nor could she recall her attempt at suicide. She jumped from the cab and ran into the water only to be rescued by Cabman Clifford.

Some of her clothing was found in the cab.

To Inspector Burckes's inquiries at Lynn to-day about the $26 she said she drew it from a Boston bank, but could not recall which bank. Finally she said she was not sure she had any money.

Miss Davis said she was born in Mayfair, Ill., and that her parents were comfortably well-to-do. She had received her education in the public schools; then, her parents dying and leaving her a small sum of money, she came East. She had difficulty in finding work in New York, so came to Boston, where she spent most of her money looking for work.

GUILD DIVORCE SUIT SHATTERS ROMANCE

Mrs. Carrie E. Guild of Winthrop, who is fighting divorce suit.

Making a counter charge of desertion, cruelty, abusive treatment and complaining bitterly against the allegation of her husband, Mrs. Carrie E. Guild of Winthrop has unexpectedly brought her side of the divorce case prominently before the courts in sensational form.

The romance thus violently being shattered dates back to the days when Arthur A. Guild and his childhood sweetheart first met. Love at first sight resulted in a quiet marriage and months of nuptial bliss. Six years they lived as man and wife and it was less than a year ago that dissensions brought their separation.

Mr. Guild is a traveling salesman, and Mrs. Guild, in her denial of charges that she would not travel with him, thus forcing the separation, declares he has been much in the society of other women. She seeks to retain custody of the infant child and the court battle crystallizes about a matter of $10,000 deposited with the Old Colony Trust Company.

To the AMERICAN Mrs. Guild said:

"I have not a word to say against my husband beyond what is necessary to say in order to obtain the custody of my child and its support. My husband travels for a Worcester corset house and is much in the society of other women, which he says is a part of his business as corset salesman. If he alleges that I would not travel with him I deny it, for I asked to go with him and he offered reasons against it.

"We were sweethearts from childhood, were always chums and married six years ago. Last Spring the break came. I have charged cruelty and abusive treatment and desertion."

Within a few days depositions were taken before a commissioner on behalf of the husband, who brought suit in an Ohio court, claiming residence in Cincinnati.

Mr. Guild as a member of the Winthrop Yacht Club, owned a yacht in Winthrop and lived there last year, and his wife will oppose his attempt to obtain a divorce in Ohio, especially since his wife's counter suit is brought in Suffolk County. A friend of the couple said yesterday:

"This is an unusual case. We who know them do not understand that there was any reason for their separation. Mr. Guild is a very successful business man. Mrs. Guild is a beautiful young woman of refinement and education. She is artistic and helps to support herself and boy by water color painting, and as a painter is well regarded by Boston artists. They have a beautiful five-year-old boy. We regard this as a case of two people well mated who have become estranged because business kept them apart too much.

"They met only four times a year for several seasons because the husband's trips kept him in the West and Middle West. We feel that their personal difficulties were magnified in their eyes, and we dislike to see a life-long romance shattered for no good reason."

Mr. Guild's account in the Old Colony Trust Company has been trusted for $10,000 by Mrs. Guild.

STRICT LAWS ON MARRIAGE

New laws regulating marriage in this State, with a heavy fine for their violation, are advocated in the report just made public by the commission appointed by former Governor Draper to investigate the question of the increase of criminals, mental defectives, epileptics and others of degraded character.

The commission, composed of Walter E. Fernald, Hollis M. Blackstone, Everett Flood, Benjamin F. Bridges and Ernest V. Scribner, says that it would seem that the sentiment of the community would approve of a sensible law prohibiting the marriage of the following:

Mental defectives of any type.

Confirmed drunkards.

Habitual criminals.

People suffering from certain other physical troubles, possibly.

"The enforcement of the proposed law," the commission says, "would be facilitated by the additional requirement that the intention of marriage in all cases should be publicly announced in the place of residence of each of the contracting parties at a sufficient interval before the ceremony to allow of intervention if necessary.

"The legal license of marriage should not be issued until the expiration of the period suggested. In any case, the entering into so important a contract as marriage should not be made without proper consideration on the part of the contracting parties."

The Question of Aliens.

In the discussion of undesirable foreigners the report says:

"He should not be allowed to land until he has presented proof that he has never been convicted of crime, that he is not insane and never has been, that he is not mentally defective, and that his parents were not defective, that he is not a pauper, and that he has no permanent inability to support himself.

"This certificate should be verified and executed by the United States consul for the district where the prospective immigrant resides. An immigrant without such certificate should not be allowed to land, but should be taken back by the vessel which brought him over. We do not now require precautions analogous to those which most countries exact with regard to the importation of domestic animals.

"Provision should also be made for the deportation at the end of their sentences of criminals who can be shown to have had a previous criminal record before entering this country.

"The Legislature might well memorialize Congress to bring about the above changes in the immigration laws."

These suggestions are made in connection with drunkenness:

Education Urged.

"Much could be done by the suitable education of the community, especially of the young with regard to the true nature and horrible dangers of this class of diseases. Systematic education along this line might well be undertaken in the public schools, colleges, boys' clubs, by social workers, etc. Under proper auspices literature should be prepared and distributed to the community.

"One of the most effective methods of dealing with habitual crime is to prevent the juvenile offender from acquiring confirmed criminal habits. The volume of juvenile crime can be reduced only by removing the known causes of juvenile crime so far as possible.

"The causes of juvenile crime [illegible] same as those which lead to a [illegible] and the ratio of juvenile crim[illegible] where the ratio of crime as a [illegible] high. All over the world most [illegible] committed in districts which [illegible] thickly populated. Overcrowding [illegible] housing produce weak and inefficient people, not equipped to fight successfully [illegible] battle of life.

"The juvenile offender seldom [illegible] from the rural districts, or from [illegible] neighborhood, or from a normal home [illegible] seldom has a normal childhood. In many cases he has one or both parents degenerate, immoral, intemperate or criminal. Often one or both parents are defective mentally. His parents are not up to the standard in health and strength. Many of these parents lose control of their children when they are very young.

BARES REVELS IN BACK BAY

The Rev. Cortland Myers, D. D., in a sermon at Tremont Temple last night, declared that Back Bay society women held wild revels in a Back Bay hotel on New Year's eve.

The Rev. Mr. Myers had said, in a sermon on the evils of intoxication, that certain women of very prominent families not only drank to excess, but after breaking up furniture and dishes danced upon the tables until they were carried helpless to their carriages and sent home.

The pastor to-day was disinclined to amplify his statements or to specify the women to whom he referred. He was willing to fix the date at New Year's eve.

Managers of the Back Bay hotels denied that any such scenes as had been described from the pulpit of Tremont Temple had been enacted in their houses.

They took pains to point out to-day that because New Year's Eve was a Saturday unusual precautions were taken to guard against disorder of any kind.

The statements that have caused so much discussion were made to illustrate the "curse of drink" against which the Rev. Mr. Myers inveighs as the greatest home destroyer of the present day.

Dr. Myers said in part: "There assembled in one of our best hotels, a hotel not far from the central square of the Back Bay of our Athens of America, a group of men and women, young women, handsome in face, figure and gowns.

"They ate, and afterward they drank to such excess that finally they had leaped upon the tables and danced there. They tore the curtains from the windows; they destroyed the furniture; they smashed up the crockery.

"Then they were carried unconscious to their carriages, and borne to the houses of some of the best known families in this city."

The minister, before concluding his sermon with a prayer that God would speed the day when women could vote, arraigned the pro-license argument that the liquor traffic has always been a great source of revenue to the country.

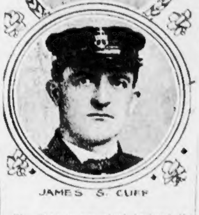
"Anyone with a grain of common sense," he said, "can see that this is absolutely false. Half of our taxes result from the saloon and the products of the saloon. At present we are crying out loudly against the trusts and the high cost of living.

"If we stop to consider that 200 millions of dollars are spent in this country every year for rum, we catch a glimpse of the true cause of the present high cost of living. That is enough to feed the poor families of the country until they are able to help themselves."

BOY OF 15 HELD AS LIQUOR SELLER

Probably the youngest person ever arrested for violating the liquor law is Thomas A. Lydon of No. 322 Amory street, Jamaica Plain, who is only fifteen years old. He was taken to station 13 charged with attempting to sell a small bottle of whiskey to Patrolman James P. Sullivan of the Jamaica Plain police station.

NAVY MAN AND MISS BILLADEAU, BRIDE OF LYNN



JAMES S. CUFF

The Mexican war cloud hastened the wedding bells of Miss Jeannette E. Billadeau of Lynn and James S. Cuff, chief machinist of the United States cruiser Washington. They were married at the rectory of the Church of St. Jean de Baptiste in Lynn, by the Rev. Jean de Parent. The bridegroom is under orders to sail on the cruiser Washington, now at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, to Guantanamo, Cuba, to join the fleet gathering in the Carribean Sea. After the ceremony the bride returned to her mother's home. The bridegroom went back to the Navy Yard.

Easter Monday was the date originally set for the wedding.

WORKS 8 YEARS ON TROUSSEAU

Miss Gladys Underwood, of No. 1,420 Commonwealth avenue, who will be a bride this week, is exhibiting to her girl friends a trousseau which she has been eight years in preparing.

The making of the trousseau has been a passion with Miss Underwood. The first pieces were finished and laid away before she met W. Cleveland Foote, to whom she will be married next Saturday. The wedding will be a society event.

There is nothing lacking in the trousseau. The bride-to-be explains to her friends:

"It's all my own, every stitch of it."

Miss Underwood is tall and willowy. She has a talent for designing clothes, and sets off her own pretty creations to perfection. She is a daughter of Frank Henry Underwood, a former alderman of Newton, and the head of the Underwood Machinery Company of Boston.

Mr. Foote is a graduate of Dartmouth, class of '08, and an athlete. He is the son of E. Warren Foote, treasurer of the State Street Trust Company. He is local manager for the telephone company in New Bedford, where he and his bride-to-be will make their home.

HAVANA, March 13.—The top of the forward turret of the battleship Maine was fished up near the bow of the wreck. Although it is twenty feet in diameter and weighs eighteen tons, it is unwarped but the terrific force of the explosion is shown by the way the bolts are shorn off. The turret top was deeply bedded in the harbor mud, and for the last two weeks has interrupted the pile driving operations to complete the coffer dam. Every previous effort to pull it up merely resulted in breaking the tackle.

BLAINES START ON BRIDAL TRIP

NEW YORK, March 13.—Waving farewell to friends from the liner Baltic, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Blaine, 3d, started on their honeymoon. A little farther down the deck stood young William T. Bull, a half-brother of Mr. Blaine, and his tutor, Jesse E. Wald, captain of the Harvard crew last year. Mr. Blaine is a grandson of James G. Blaine, and his wife until March 9 was Miss Marion Dow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Dow of Boston. Young Bull who is sixteen years old, is going to Heidelberg to study, preparatory to entering Harvard.

MEN'S MISSION AT CATHEDRAL

Two thousand women attended the closing exercises of their annual mission at the Cathedral. Last night a week's mission for men opened with a large congregation. Missionaries from the Passionist monastery at Brighton are conducting the services. The head of the band, Father Alexis, delivered the opening sermon at last night's services and took for his subject "The Importance of a Mission." The Rev. Thomas R. McCoy was celebrant of the solemn benediction, with the Rev. J. J. Crane as deacon and the Rev. William B. Finigan as sub-deacon.

PASTOR ATTACKS EXCISE BOARD

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, declared to his congregation yesterday that: "The Boston Board of Excise Commissioners is a disgrace to the city; a disgrace to the man who appointed it; its members appear to have lost the power to blush and ought to resign."

Rev. Mr. Johnson told of his personal observations at the Hotel Upton, No. 130 Dartmouth street, where, he says, the Sunday liquor law has been openly violated. The Excise Commissioners, he said, paid as much attention to his complaint against the hotel as could be expected from three sacks of meal.

His Complaint Ignored.

"It was on a Sunday evening when Jack Johnson was in the city that I saw twenty men lined up two deep in front of the bar at Hotel Upton, drinking liquor without any semblance of food in sight," said Mr. Johnson.

"This was a flagrant violation of the law. Perfect pandemonium reigned within and outside of the hotel, which held a large crowd. A light-colored touring car stood in front, and I was informed that Johnson was inside, although I have no personal knowledge that this was so.

"With me were two women of this church who, like myself, are willing to swear to what we saw. I wrote the excise commissioners about the matter and informed them of my willingness to make oath to the facts, but they have paid no attention to my charge.

"I have seen white and black women drunk and fighting in that place. An excise commission that will shut its eyes to such conditions and violations of the law has certainly passed beyond the power of blushing. But I want to tell them that many good men and women who know what is going on are blushing for them."

Will Swear to It.

Israel Rue, proprietor of the hotel, denies that men ever drank at the bar on Sunday. "I don't know where Mr. Johnson got his information," he said, "but somebody may have noticed the white-coated waiters being served with liquor at the bar and reported that they had seen customers drinking there.

"We know the law and are not inviting a revocation of our liquor license. Every person served with liquor Sunday sits at a table and is also provided with food in accordance with legal requirements."

When told of the denial, Mr. Johnson said:

"There was no mistake on the Sunday evening in question. I know where the bar is located and know the difference between waiters and patrons. The men I saw drinking at the bar wore street clothes and hats—and not white coats or aprons. They were ordinary patrons and I am prepared to swear to it."

WOULD TATTOO ALL MARRIED WOMEN

CHICAGO, March 13.—Fewer "mashers" would show traces of discolored optics and the stock excuse, "I didn't know she was married," no longer would avail should the suggestion of the Rev. Mr. Francis Rawel, a native Methodist clergyman of New Zealand, be put into effect in Chicago.

Speaking before the Cook County Teachers' Association, Mr. Rawel advocated the tattooing of married women's chins that men seeking to be conquered by the charms of the fair sex might distinguish between those in and out of the matrimonial market.

WOMAN LODGER IS DEAD FROM GAS

Mrs. Emogene Chamberlain, aged 50, was found dead in bed in her room at No. 568 Columbus avenue with the gas turned on, a rubber tube leading from the jet to her mouth. Medical Examiner Leary decided to have an autopsy made on the body.

The woman was a lodger at the house for the past two years. She was a dressmaker. To friends at Portland, Me., she had written that she was discouraged. She had been divorced in Maine.

STILL DEMAND LOWER BERTHS

CHICAGO, March 13.—Although reduced Pullman berth rates have been in effect since February 1, passenger traffic officials on lines entering Chicago declare that there has been no appreciable increase in the demand for upper berths, the price for which was cut to 80 per cent. of lower berth rates.

STORER SCORES FRENCH RULE

Sharp contrasts between Catholicism in France and in the United States are made by Bellamy Storer, who was ambassador of the United States to Austria under the administration of President Roosevelt.

Mr. Storer, who has spent much time in France, says religion is free and Catholicism prospers in the United States. In France, he says, atheists in control of the government are avowedly attempting to stamp out the Catholic and eventually all forms of religion. In an address before the Knights of Columbus at Worcester he said:

"Graft in Charity."

"It was the Catholics of France who came to America as missionaries to implant the faith of St. Peter and the other apostles of Christ. In those days it was the pride of France to be uppermost in the spreading of the faith of the apostolic church, and the kings labored with them in the work.

"In the Reign of Terror Robespierre sought to abolish Christianity, driving the clergy out upon the representation that the church was inimical to a democratic form of government.

"When the concordat was suspended in 1904 the same cry was raised against the church, the members of the clergy, save those connected with what the government calls charitable work, having been banished and the property of the churches confiscated. The anti-clerical party raised the cry, 'The property for the millions.' Two hundred million dollars, the people of France were told would come to France through the confiscation, and that that amount would suffice to pay for the taxations, particularly in respect to pensions.

"It was said that this money was to be used for charitable purposes. The last report of the minister of justice shows that $4,000,000 were collected for taxation and that it required $3,000,000 to collect this or 75 cents for every dollar. The State under this report had paid out to the sick less than 10 per cent. In one instance one person was paid $10 and in another $6.

"Divorce Is Easy."

"This is the way France was progressing under the approved pattern of modern agnostic civilization. The reports of the minister of justice proved that there had been shameless plunder and graft. The old-age pensions are not paid. The sanctity of the marriage tie has been most ruthlessly violated on every hand under the new order of things in France.

"Divorces have been granted for many reasons. In France a couple can now obtain a divorce if they lived apart three years. This reason will suffice of itself.

"The management of funerals, which was in the hands of the parishes, by the breaking of the concordant and under the new law, was taken away from these parishes. Under the new law $8,000,000 appropriated for the maintenance of the churches, the property and the clergy was stricken from the budget in 1905. It was ordered that religious education should cease.

"It is legally impossible for a French Catholic to have masses said for his soul when he is dead.

"The atheists furnish the schools and conduct them according to their godless ideas. The whole purpose is to teach atheism to the children and to make them look to the State for their welfare and their religion. The atheism of France wants to do for the future what it now boasts it has done for the present.

"Atheists in Control."

"We Americans have made up our minds that the republican form of government is ideal. We believe that all religious beliefs under this form of government should receive justice under the law. Our country was the first to declare for this. It is the country in which this theory is most respected. But we never have had the experience that some of the nations of Europe have had with this theory.

"To many American people there comes rejoicing that France is a republic. The American people believe that no republican form of government can be a tyranny."

Mr. Storer referred to the Irish race as being responsible to a great extent for the ideal Catholic conditions that exist in the United States. The history of America is exactly opposite to that of France. Ireland in her Catholicism showed brave example, he said.

WANT PARKMAN FUND FOR PARKS

An appeal to Mayor Fitzgerald and the City Council that not more than 50 per cent. of the income of the Parkman fund be expended in any one year for the proposed zoological garden in Franklin Park and aquarium in Marine Park until local parks and playgrounds which were in existence in 1887, and may benefit by the fund, are put in better condition, is made in a letter issued by the United Improvement Association. The organization says that a cursory study of the condition of local parks and playgrounds shows that large and immediate expenditures are necessary to bring them up to the proper standard.

FORMER SALEM GIRL HELD IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 13.—Seven young girls and women, six of them in one store, were arrested, charged with shoplifting. A good looking girl who gave her name first as Miss Helen Holmes and then as Alma Ward, was charged with stealing a silk waist and other articles. She said she formerly lived in Salem, and offered as bail jewelry valued at nearly $1,000.

TILLINGHAST AS AN AIR-SCOUT?

Wallace E. Tillinghast, the famous Worcester aviator, refused to deny the report to-day that his mysterious airship is to be sent to the Mexican border. He continues to refuse to show his machine to the public.

"I have nothing to say," said Mr. Tillinghast, in Worcester to-day. "Charles J. Glidden of Boston has seen my machine, and he is satisfied."

Mr. Glidden says he is convinced that Tillinghast has a real, flying, airship; that he took flights in it last Summer; and that he carried a searchlight. Now the rumor in Worcester is that as a result of Mr. Glidden's visit, the Tillinghast airship will be sent to fly along the Texas-Mexican border for the U. S. Army. Mr. Tillinghast refused to-day to talk about this rumor. Mr. Glidden says of the famous airship of Tillinghast:

"I've seen it. It's a monoplane. It seems a very substantial machine. Mr. Tillinghast has been mysterious about it on account of his patents. Yes, he used a searchlight. That Long Island lighthouse-keeper who said he saw a mysterious airship with a searchlight, evidently saw Tillinghast. Mr. Tillinghast said he has made about a half dozen flights, the longest being thirty-seven miles. I promised I wouldn't tell where the machine is kept. Mr. Tillinghast says she has been up 3,000 feet, and he looks like a man who knows what he is talking about."

NEW WAY OF BURYING DEAD

MILWAUKEE, March 13.—A great mausoleum large enough to hold 1,000 bodies, which are to be sealed in vacuum vaults and preserved by a new method, is planned for Milwaukee by the socialist administration, which proposes to establish municipal burial crypts.

B. & A. MEN WILL VOTE ON STRIKE

Unless the strike of the boiler makers of the New York Central and Lake Shore railroads is settled before April 1 there is danger of a strike of the machinists and blacksmiths in the shops of the Boston & Albany at Allston and Springfield.

MR. HALL REPLIES TO RABBI WISE

Prescott F. Hall of Boston, secretary of the Immigration Restriction League, when he was asked to-day about the attack Rabbi Stephen S. Wise had made on him in New York, declared the rabbi had probably misunderstood his use of the word "freight" in reference to immigrants from European countries. "I argued before the Republican Club of New York as a restrictionist," he said. "Rabbi Wise argued as a free immigrationist. When I used the word freight I was looking at the matter of immigration from the steamship point of view. My argument was that the steamship companies find it more profitable to bring over the immigrants than other kinds of freight. Immigrants are no more freight to me than they are to the rabbi."

3 WOMEN AND MAN DIE IN SNOWSLIDE

DENVER, March 13.—Four were killed and one injured by a snow-slide that destroyed the boarding house at Gold King mine, near Gladstone, in southwestern Colorado, Sunday. The dead are Mrs. F. O. Drue, Mrs. Carrie Lewis, Samuel Hoar and Maria Fahne. F. O. Drue, manager of the boarding house, was rescued by a search party.

IRISH TO OPEN ROME CHURCH

ROME, March 13.—Irish residents in Rome or visitors to the city will assemble on St. Patrick's morning in the new church of the Irish Augustinians, now nearing completition on the Via Ludoviel.

This edifice, to be known as St. Patrick's, will be the national one of Ireland in Rome. Architects say that it is one of the finest examples of ecclesiastical art in the modern city. It was begun in the Winter of 1908. The exterior is finished, but several years will be required to embellish the interior.

In the mean time the church is to be blessed and formally opened. Cardinal Martinelli, formerly Papal Delegate to the United States, and a member of the Augustinians, will bless the church on March 16. On the following day the Pope's sacristan, Mgr. Zampini, will celebrate the first mass in the new temple. Another member of the College of Cardinals will give the benediction in the evening. The preacher will be Very Rev. David Fleming, O. S. F., ex-Consultor of the Holy Office.

Crowned by Irish Cross.

The structure is 175 feet long and 78 feet wide. It is divided into three naves by columns of granite, with interposed pilasters. An Irish cross, carved in stone, crowns the edifice, and over the entrance is a mosaic of St. Patrick receiving his mission from the Pope. This is to be flanked by statues of St. Brigid and St. Columbkille. Irish occupation of Rome dates back to the days when the Augustinians, driven from their native heath, were sheltered in the Italian houses of their order. Since that time they have ministered to the spiritual needs of the Irish residents here and conducted a college for the education of Irish students of the order.

Pope Alexander VII. in 1656 gave them the convent and church of San Matteo in Merulana, near St. John's. This was an old priory of the suppressed "Crociferi."

Exempt from Suppression.

After the French Revolution, when Rome was sacked and monasteries destroyed, they got in recompense from Pope Pius VII, February 12, 1819, the convent and church of St. Maria in Postrula, which belonged to the extinct "Celestine."

"In 1870 the Italian government recognized the Augustinians as a foreign institution and as such exempt from suppression by the International Law of Guarantees. They also have a guarantee that St. Patrick's juridically is the same foundation as Postrula and enjoys the same international safeguards. Their most important foundation in the United States is Villanova College, near Philadelphia.

PEORIA CATHOLICS EAT MEAT ON FRIDAY

PEORIA, Ill., March 13.—The Pope has granted a dispensation to the Roman Catholics of the Peoria diocese allowing them to eat meat on St. Patrick's day (a Friday) in response to a request by Bishop Dunne sent to Rome a few days ago. Father Barnes of St. Mary's Cathedral proclaimed the dispensation upon receipt of a cablegram. Bishop Dunne is highly pleased with the action of the Pope and says the people of the diocese will appreciate the concession of the Lent season. So far as known no other American bishop made the same request of the Pope and the Peoria clergy felt unusually favored.

TWENTY-SIX BURIED BY MINE CAVE-IN

DULUTH, Minn., March 13.—Ten bodies have been taken from the Morgan open-pit mine at Virginia, Minn., where a cave-in occurred, burying twenty-six miners. Sixteen bodies have not been reached. A large force of men is working vigorously, but it is not believed any of the men will be taken out alive. The cause of the catastrophe is atributable to the thaws of the last few days, which suddenly loosened boulders and earth and caused the ore body to slide toward the bottom of the pit.

SAND CURES A CASE OF CANCER

Sand—plain, common, every day sand from the country or the beach—is absorbing attention of scientific men. Last Fall William A. Graustein of Cambridge the Charlestown milk contractor, prescribed doses of sand for indigestion. To-day, Mr. Graustein learned that his sand had cured a bad case of cancer in Trenton, N. J. Now he says sand will cure appendicitis.

His latest cure is the case of C. H. Coates, a New Jerseyite, whom the doctors couldn't save with their Roentgen rays. Three years ago he was given up. Coates is alive and well, as a result of taking the "bird gravel" cure. Coates gained seventy pounds after taking from a half to a teaspoonful of sterilized sand daily.

"Since I first advanced my cure," said Mr. Graustein, "I have received fully 10,000 queries. They were so numerous I have to have circulars printed. In the first month I got 5,000 letters, from all over the land.

"One man telephoned me from Chicago. He said he was ninety years old and suffered from acute indigestion. He took my cure. He is alive and well.

"Between 400 and 500 have told me sand cured their indigestion. Many others have said it was efficacious in curing appendicitis. Sand can be taken for almost all human ailments."

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I had to make water every two or three hours through the day and night. I passed but a very small quantity, but with a scalding and straining at the end of each passage. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our best doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He put me up a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it, I felt a change. The scalding sensation did not bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and so got a large bottle for one-dollar but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours,

"Fighting The Great White Plague"

SIROLIN
Versus Old-Fashioned "Cough Cures"
The Swiss prescription marks many years' advance in the treatment of throat and lung ailments.

MANY of the old-fashioned Cough Syrups, Cough "Cures," and "Discoveries" were a relief in some affections of the throat and lungs—but they also did great harm.

Most cheap remedies have contained such active poisons as Morphine, Codeine, Prussic Acid, Chloroform, and Cannabis Indica—little wonder that they were able to deaden the symptoms of Coughs and Colds and similar ailments.

But they had little effect on the cause of these affections and they almost always upset the stomach—ruined the appetite—dried up the secretions—caused constipation—and many have created dangerous drug habits.

Realizing the danger in popular cough remedies, recent laws in certain sections of the United States prohibit the sale of cough remedies containing active poisons.

These laws have compelled the manufacturers to change their formulas, so that now most of the popular cough remedies will be found without their old-time effects, which was due to the dangerous narcotic drugs which they formerly contained.

SIROLIN comes from Switzerland to America to take the place of the old-fashioned cough and cold remedies. It is endorsed by the leading throat and lung specialists of Europe for trifling, as well as the most serious ailments of the throat and lungs.

SIROLIN not only effectually combats symptoms but removes the cause of throat and lung affections. It tones the system—creates appetite.

SIROLIN is a truly modern preparation and is becoming recognized throughout the world as one of the great agents in fighting "The Great White Plague" through its power to prevent coughs and colds and other throat and lung ailments from becoming serious maladies, such as Pneumonia and Consumption.

Your druggist now has SIROLIN, or can get it for you.

BRING $30,000 PRIZE CATTLE

The largest shipment of thoroughbred cattle ever brought to America came in to-day on the Leyland liner Cambrian from London. The consignment includes ninety-six head of thoroughbred Jerseys, shipped direct from Jersey Island in the English channel. The cattle represent an investment said to be in the neighborhood of $30,000. The herd was purchased for the Cottage farm, Worcester, owned by Harry V. Prentice.

There were but ninety-three head when the journey started from the other side. At sea four calves were born, one of them dying. The other three are as spry as any land-born calves.

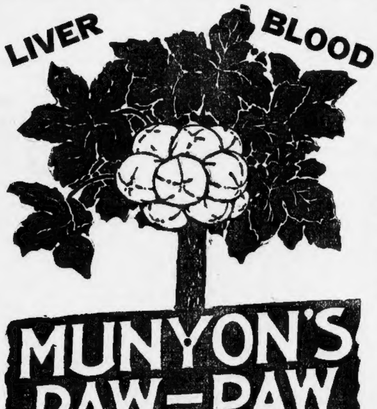
CONSTIPATION



Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are unlike all other laxative or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken, but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition, and corrects constipation. In my opinion, constipation is responsible for most ailments. There are 28 feet of human bowels, which is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe becomes clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. No woman who suffers with constipation or any liver ailment can expect to have a clear complexion or enjoy good health. If I had my way I would prohibit the sale of nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold, for the reason that they soon destroy the lining of the stomach, setting up serious forms of indigestion, and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope; they are soothing, healing and stimulating. They school the bowels to act without physic.

FISHER TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Walter L. Fisher of Chicago was sworn in as Secretary of the Interior to-day, succeeding Richard A. Ballinger. The oath of office was administered by W. B. Acker, chief of the miscellaneous division.

Mr. Fisher, after taking the oath, said he would spend some time getting acquainted with the affairs of the office. Following that he would devote several weeks and probably months, in studying the details of the department. Before then, he said he could reach no determination as to what policies would be pursued under his administration, or whether there would be any shakeup in the department.

WOMEN RUSH TO WALKER TRIAL

NEWPORT, March 13.—The courtroom was packed here to-day when the hearing was resumed in the divorce suit brought against Civil Engineer James Wilson Grimes Walker, U. S. N., by Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker. Every seat in the room was taken. Most of those attending were women.

Through the dinner hour recess all the women clung tl their seats, preferring to sit it out rather than risk losing their chairs in the crush about the doors for the afternoon session.

Dr. Charles M. Whitney of Boston was the first witness called to the stand. He said he had treated Lieutenant Walker during five weeks in 1903. He described the nature of the disease and his treatment.

The rumor that Walker himself would appear on the stand in his own defence this afternoon brought a greater crush to the doors than showed up when court opened.

In her suit Mrs. Walker alleges cruelty and neglect, and that her husband has been too friendly with another woman. She asks the court to allow alimony and support for their four children. The couple have lived in Boston, Brookline and Charlestown. Her suit has attracted widespread attention because of the prominence of the families of herself and her husband.

CONSTANTINO SINGS WITH SYMPHONY

A great audience attended the Pension Fund concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which occurred in Symphony Hall last night. The program was more popular in character than the Symphony usually plays, but it was thoroughly delightful. Florenzio Constantino, the tenor, had volunteered his services for the Pension Fund, and sang among other things, probably for the first time in concert, the aria of Johnson, from "The Girl of the Golden West."

The male chorus of the Cecilia sang against the orchestra the words of the "Blue Danube Waltz," a composition which was originally written for chorus and orchestra, although the chorus has seldom been sung in this country. The ever popular "Nutcracker" suite of Tschaikowski rounded out the program most delightfully.

URGES MEMORIAL TO GENERAL B. F. BUTLER

Believing that General Benjamin F. Butler was the greatest soldier of the Civil War, A. M. Seagrave, a Civil War veteran of Uxbridge, has started a movement for a memorial to take the form of an equestrian statue of General Butler to be placed in the Boston Public Garden. "It is fitting that one of the greatest generals of the Civil War should have some public memorial near the State House, where he served as Governor," said Mr. Seagrave. "I shall start a petition asking that the Legislature authorize such a tribute. I never saw an officer who could give such quick decisions on important matters and strike the correct solution, and if there was any fighting going on he was in the thick of it, on the firing line."

AMERICANS SHOT IN DUEL OVER WOMAN

PARIS, March 13.—Two Americans were injured in a revolver duel over a woman at the cafe Morras early to-day. One was a wealthy Missouri man named Lee, and the other a dancer named Morris. Morris was seriously injured and Lee was shot in the leg.

It is said that Lee has for some time been paying attentions to a dancer who has been appearing with Morris and that the latter had warned his compatriot to stay away.

The duel caused a panic, and the place wsa depopulated when the two men began shooting.

MISS CLARA BARTON IS SERIOUSLY ILL

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Loved and revered by many a soldier wounded in battle, to whom she administered tender aid, Miss Clara Barton, ninety, founder and organizer and for many years president of the National Red Cross Society in the United States, is seriously ill at her cottage "Red Cross," near this city. Her physician, Dr. J. B. Hubbell of Washington, is constantly at her side. He diagnosed her case as that of a double attack of bronchitis and pneumonia.

5,000 SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN TO PARADE

Children representing the Sunday schools of five hundred churches in and around Greater Boston will parade Sunday afternoon, April 23, preceding the great missionary rally in Mechanics Building. It is expected that 5,000 persons will be in line. The parade will form on Boston Common and march to Mechanics Building. The purpose of the parade is to promote missionary enthusiasm in the Sunday schools and young people's societies of Greater Boston.

NEW BEDFORD CITY CLERK SERIOUSLY ILL

NEW BEDFORD, March 13.—Physicians have little hope for the recovery of Daniel B. Leonard, who for over twenty years has been city clerk of New Bedford. He is suffering from a complication of disease.

MILLIONAIRE IS A BUSY GROCER

Quite the most popular grocery clerk in Malden is Harold Clarke Durrell, Harvard '05, and millionaire. Malden's youngest and fairest matrons find it quite necessary these days to go personally to the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa store in Malden square and order their own groceries. In fact grocery shopping bids fair to assume the appearance of a function in the best social circles of Malden, Melrose and contiguous territory.

A glance at Mr. Durrell's daily routine indicates that he hasn't a very easy time earning that $10 a week which his employers pay him.

Routine for Day.

He lives with his mother at No. 17 Dana street, Cambridge. Here's his routine for to-day:

5:30 o'clock—Bathed, shaved, dressed and breakfasted.
6:30—Boarded a trolley car for Malden.
7—Arrived at grocery store.
7:01—Took off overcoat, coat and hat; donned store frock.
7:15 to 8—Helped other clerks arrange counters.
8 to 12—Sold goods and assisted other clerks.
8:35—Made his first sale of day (two dozen of eggs).
12—Went to lunch.
12:30—Returned from lunch and again put on gray frock.
12:30 to 6—Repetition of morning.
6 o'clock—Calls it a day, dons good clothes and goes home.

Mr. Durrell, who is twenty-three, tall blonde, well set up and handsome, doesn't look at all bad in his gray grocery frock with basket wristlets. He has long wished to enter the grocery business—even in the Cambridge Latin School and in Harvard he had visions of the delights of standing behind the counter and purveying the richly scented spices of Araby the Blest, the fragrant teas of China and Japan, the aromatic coffee of Java, alias Brazil, and savory dried fruits, as well as the humble soda cracker, sugar, butter and other staples.

Receives $10 a Week.

Hence his starting at the bottom of the grocery ladder as junior clerk at $10 a week, or $1.66 2-3 a day. On Saturdays he works fifteen hours with no extra remuneration.

Mr. Durrell doesn't care to talk any more for publication concerning his grocery venture. "I'm not here to be interviewed," he told a reporter today. "I'm too busy anyway. I do not see why the newspapers cannot let me alone."

At this fateful moment one of the older clerks, who gets $15 a week, handed the young millionaire a sales slip and a $2 bill.

"Hurry up to the cashier's desk with this," he said—just like that, and young Mr. Durrell trotted off like a good little boy.

Sad though it be to relate, the truth must be told that the other clerks, to all of whom Mr. Durrell is junior, seem to take mild delight in having a millionaire at their beck and call. He does their errands willingly, and, incidentally, a lot of little duties they have suddenly discovered they haven't time to attend to themselves.

MAYOR TO TALK FOR BARRY IN CAMBRIDGE

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will enter into the thickest of the political campaign now going on in Cambridge. To-night he will make a whirlwind tour in that city to support the candidacy of J. Edward Barry, the regular Democratic candidate for Mayor. Several speakers from Boston have been heard from Mr. Barry's platform during the past two weeks of the campaign. Mayor Fitzgerald to-night will speak in every ward of the city. The election to-morrow will bring to a close one of the hottest political fights in this city for many years. Mr. Barry is opposed to Edward B. James, Independent candidate, and Jeremiah F. Donovan, Non-partisan candidate.

NEWTON OUT AGAINST "REAL BOSTON" PLAN

Suburban opposition to the Chamber of Commerce's "Real Boston" project gathered force by the issuance of the report of the special committee appointed by the Newton Board of Aldermen to investigate the plan. An exhaustive report on the subject, raising objections from many points of view, has been unanimously signed by the committee, passed by the aldermen and approved by Mayor Charles E. Hatfield.

RUNAWAY HORSE WRECKS AN AUTO

A runaway horse on Beacon street near the State House threw 200 people into panic, wrecked a truck loaded with dressed beef and caused the smashing of an automobile in front of the Somerset Club, shortly before noon to-day. The horse, which had been attached to one of the big Sturtevant & Healey wagons, broke away from his traces. The animal was finally caught at the junction of Arlington and Beacon streets.

WOMAN DYING FROM BURNS

PEABODY, March 13.—Mrs. Catherine L. Keefe, aged sixty-five years, was fatally burned here to-day when her clothing ignited from a small bonfire in which she was destroying rubbish in the yard of her home at No. 55 Midway street. With her dress forming a sheet of flame, the aged woman tottered about, shrieking for help.

Her cries attracted Mrs. Roache, a neighbor, who ran to her aid with blankets. Dr. Hickey was called and Mrs. Keefe was removed to Thomas Hospital in a dying condition. She is the widow of Andrew Keefe, and lived here with her son Edward H. Keefe, a business man of this place.

U. S. ARMY PRERARES FOR MARCH INTO MEXICO

Force of Men Is Brought Up to 15,000 by To-day's Arrivals.

the commander, General Carter and his staff welcomed the visitors. Colonel Roosevelt only remained at the camp thirty minutes.

The great camp got down to stern military routine to-day. Although a section of parade ground is a mass of deep sticky mud the higher part of the field is dry and in excellent shape. Reports are persistent that the original plan to "storm" Galveston will be abandoned and that the manoeuvring will take place along the banks of the Rio Grande. This move would serve the double purpose of drilling the soldiers and prevent smuggling of arms and ammunition across to the insurrectos.

A wireless station has been constructed and camp telephones are being established. It is said that a series of wireless stations will be erected near the border line.

Busy Drilling in Galveston.

A dispatch from Galveston says that 1,200 coast artillerymen, transformed into infantrymen to-day began the drilling and hard work which will fit them, as the men believe, for the chapparal and mountains of Mexico. A platoon of machine guns to be mounted on backs of mountain-climbing Missouri mules, six guns to each of the three companies of the provisional brigade, has been authorized from Washington and the equipment is now on the way.

General Mills and Colonel Bailey passed up religious services and hiked to the westward on Galveston Island. There they picked out several hundred acres of the worst possible country to be found, filled with marshes, barb wire fences and other pleasant details of hard marching. The infantry drill began there to-day.

Three companies of Colonel Bailey's regiment may be transferred to Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, where they will be placed ready for instant call to the Rio Grande. Evidencing a possible quick move and field service, only light marching order equipment is allowed the men. Several non-commissioned officers secured cots to be used in their tents, but these were promptly ordered out of camp, and orders given all men to not collect anything that they could not leave behind.

An official investigation was begun to-day by Colonel Bradley and officers of the regiment to place the responsibility of trouble in the city Saturday night, in which Private Jewell was stabbel and a policeman wounded. Because it is believed that a negro stabbed the soldier, much hard feeling exists among men, and a provost guard has been stationed in the city.

Washington dispatches to-day say that with preparations all complete for the sending of 15,000 more troops to the Mexican border, war clouds are piling up for President Taft. He will have to face a concerted attack in the next session of Congress and defend the mobilization of troops and naval vessels that to-day have Mexico hemmed in from north, east and west. The "war game" will be assailed in both House and Senate.

The cause of the Mexican Insurrectos is to be taken up by leaders of the Republican Insurgents in the Senate as soon as possible after the opening of the extra session of Congress. Senator La Follette will be the commander-in-chief of the revolutionary forces in the north end of the Capitol. He has let his attitude be known to several of his colleagues, and he will receive support from many of the more radical anti-administration Republicans as soon as he gives the signal for the forces to advance. Senator Borah of Idaho is another one of the Senate mobilization Insurgents.

Champ Clark an Insurrecto.

The anti-Diaz forces in the House are represented principally by Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania, a Democrat. It was he who brought pressure to bear on the rules committee during the session a year ago and obtained a hearing on the cases of alleged persecution of Mexican refugees by officials of the United States Government. He is known to be organizing an attack on the Taft administration for its intervention policy.

Speaker-to-be Champ Clark, in the records of the hearings before the rules committee made indignant remarks after listening to some of the testimony. It is reported that he is not in sympathy with the Taft policy regarding Mexico. Those senators and representatives opposed to the "manoeuvres" proposed to fight any urgent deficiency appropriation, which will be necessary to pay the expenses of the Rio Grande campaign.

AWAITING WORD TO ENTER MEXICO

SAN ANTONIO, March 13.—Major General William H. Carter has formally taken command of the United States "Army of Observation" in Texas, has named his staff and there isn't an officer or man of the 20,000 regulars now in this State who doesnt' believe that within a week or ten days the force will be on the way to cross the Rio Grande.

Every organization is being placed on a war footing. Recruits are being rushed from the depots to fill up depleted regiments and "skeleton" companies are being made into full commands. Officers high in command privately admit this is an unusual procedure for peaceful maneuvers.

A most significant fact is that the big pontoon train which arrived here to-day was ordered to be held in the railroad yards instead of being unloaded. The pontoons will be necessary if a crossing of the Rio Grande in force is to be made.

It is an open secret in camp that the Eleventh and Ninth Cavalry are held in readiness for a dash at a moment's notice. That dash will be in the direction of the Mexican border. Commanding officers of these two regiments are keeping their commands in such shape that within ten minutes after "Booth and Saddles" is sounded they will be marching out for the Rio Grande. Colonel James Parker of the Eleventh will command both organizations, which will work as an independent brigade.

On Ful' War Footing.

General Carter to-day established his headquarters in the field. Brigade commanders have been given their assignments. To the experienced eye there are many signs that indicate the camp here is not intended to be a permanent one, or even occupied for any great length of time. There are no floors in the tents, trainloads of supplies, instead of being at once unloaded and taken to the camp, are held on sidings ready to be sent further south, and every enlisted man is carrying ninety rounds, the war complement, of service ammunition, in his belt. Pack trains are being arranged and the equipment and supplies already on the ground are on a basis of at least a six months' field campaign. Discipline never was stricter in the field, and if this be a "war game" there is no question but what it is planned to be a most realistic one.

One more significant fact. None of the troop trains are going back north. Fully 1,500 passenger coaches are held here on permanent or temporary sidings. Locomotives are being held with steam up in the railroad yards. Full train crews are being held in readiness night and day. These arrangements are not made for the purpose of taking out troops back to their regular stations. Everyone here connected with the army voices the belief in private that in a few days the present occupants will vacate the camp here and their places will be taken by an equal number of troops who will be ordered here, perhaps to-day or to-morrow, if they already have not received instructions to prepare for field service.

More Troops Arrive.

There are more than 12,000 troops of all arms here now. Arrivals to-day at this camp will bring the total up to almost 15,000. Five thousand more are at El Paso and other points. A downpour of rain transformed the camp into a field of mud but it dried quickly after the sun came out. Many of the enlisted men are suffering from the unwonted heat but there are no serious cases of illness. The cavalry and field artillery camps were scenes of interest to thousands of visitors and the real fact that these commands are being kept in readiness for a prompt move was clearly evident to experienced eyes.

Officers will not, of course, talk for publication, but more than two-thirds of them in private conversation expess that the American army is to be thrown into Mexico, for the purpose, primarily, of supporting the Monroe doctrine, restoring peace, and keeping foreign countries whose citizens have interests in danger from making hostile demonstrations.

In that event, as these officers see it, we would surely have to engage in war, either with the Diaz government or with the revolutionists, perhaps with both, for neither side wants our troops upon Mexican soil.

Warning to Japan.

A large number believe the concentration to be nothing less than a stern warning to Japan.

Unofficially, there is much talk here that Enrique C. Creel, Minister of Foreign Affairs in the cabinet of President Diaz, has been dickering with the Japanese Government which is credited with an ambition to secure a coaling station and naval base on Magdalena Bay, a place formerly utilized by our navy, through an arrangement with the Diaz Government, for a naval rendezvous and target grounds, and officers of the Army, who regard this demonstration as directed at Japan rather than at either faction in the Mexican revolution, believe that placing 20,000 American troops along the Rio Grande is for the purpose of being able to jump them promptly to San Diego or San Pedro, points which are considered by the strategy board as being the most likely points at which Japan would endeavor to land an army.

Japan, these officers point out, struck Russia without notice, and they believe that Washington has information that Nippon is about to attack us, hence the tremendously costly "maneuvres" now under way, which a high officer of the army to-day told the Globe correspondent had already called for an outlay of $2,000,000.

Grim Work Ahead.

There is an indefinable feeling of large impending events in the air, a feeling on the part of many based rather on intuition than positive knowledge that there is grim work ahead.

In the aeroplane hangars back of Fort Sam Houston, Lieutenant Fouiois of the signal corps and his assistants are busy getting their machines ready for scouting operations. One of the machines is assembled, and the second is almost ready. The third machine is on the way. The aeroplane will be extensively used, and a number of long-distance flights from San Antonio to points on the Rio Grande will probably be made this week. Lieutenant Loulois and Philip Parmalee of the Wright team will make all the flights.

Lessons Already Taught.

Many of the officers bitterly criticize the slowness with which the present mobilization is being accomplished.

"They blow a bugle in Paris and assemble 60,000 soldiers in a few hours, while here it takes us two weeks to get together 15,000," an officer said to-day.

The officers say that this slowness is the best proof the country has ever had of the need of the maintenance of large brigade posts throughout the country. Then they also point to the fact that they are now called upon to drill into shape several thousand recruits on the shortest possible notice. Each regiment, if recruited to full war strength, will find itself burdened with about 700 recruits, who may have been fitted to war service within a few days, if not hours.

AMERICANS DIED BRAVELY AT BATTLE OF CASAS GRANDES

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

EL PASO, March 13.—The battle of Casas Grandes was a set back for the Insurrectos, but they came up smiling and claim it was the fortune of war and will be retrieved.

It has been impossible so far to verify the list of Americans dead. Colonel Paul Mason, a soldier of fortune of Honduras and Nicaragua, came in to-day from the fight, and says that Captain DeLara was not killed.

The junta officials also say positively that DeLara is alive. On the other hand Roy Kelly, the Insurrecto, who gave me the story, reiterated his story of DeLara's death, saying he saw him fall and that it caused great mourning; that Madero himself gasped and said: "This is terrible. We have lost DeLara." The preponderance of evidence is that DeLara was not killed. Colonel Mason said he had a talk with President Madero after the fight, when his leader said:

"This defeat is bad, but not serious. It may set our plans back at present, but it will not have a lasting effect, for we are now stronger than before. One defeat never lost a war, and, though I lost the battle I have gained experience. I cannot tell you what my next move will be, but we will not move up on Casas Grandes until we have made complete preparations."

Secretary of State Garza had letters from Madero of about the same tenor, saying that besides the scouts, he blames Colonel Soto for the defeat, charging that Soto became panic stricken and that this caused the troops to retreat. Both the scouts and Soto were being court-martialed at the time, and their fate can be readily surmised.

Colonel Wason said: "The attack was made in three columns, one under command of Colonel Soto and Major Hay and the other under Lieutenant-Colonel Garibaldi and Captain Paul Madero, a brother of the President and the advance column under Captain Roque Garza, a brother of the Secretary of State and Captain Harrington.

The terrible fire of the Americans under Captain Alanais and Harrington drove the Federals back. Roy Glenn, formerly a bellboy at the Sheldon Hotel in El Paso, then took the lead and was killed within ten feet of the Federal trenches.

Glenn killed twenty-two Federals before he got a bullet through his brain. Lever, a French American also made a record of twenty odd Federals before he was killed.

Major Hay, with several comrades, then filled their arms with dynamite bombs and with lighted cigars, with which to fire them, advanced on the Federal lines. They charged down the main street lighting the bomb fires with their cigars, but finally were killed to the last man.

15,000 MORE MEN TO BE MOBILIZED FOR "MANOEUVRES"

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The "war game" grows in extent every hour. Plans to assemble from 15,000 to 20,000 more men in Texas and California are complete and it is believed that preliminary orders for their mobilization have been issued. It is an open secret that orders have been sent to the militia of several States to prepare for service. The "invitations" to militia officers to "participate in the manouevres" is regarded by those well posted in army doings as not only in the nature of a "bluff," but also an intimation that the enlisted men of the militia will soon be "invited" to take part in the Texan "war game." Activity continues at both war and navy departments, and officers in charge of the staff corps departments are especially busy.

The naval contingent that will participate in the "war game" will do so on a war footing. Every vessel under orders to rendezvous at Guantanamo or at points along the Mexican coast is going with full coal bunkers, full amunition rooms and with torpedoes with war heads.

Reports of a race riot at Galveston, following the stabbing of a coast artillery man by a negro have been received at the war depot.

One Mexican and four negroes were severely beaten, and the house in front of which the stabbing ocurred was set on fire and burned to the ground it is alleged by soldiers in revenge. The entire police force of the city was called out to quell the disturbance.

CIVIL WAR IN MEXICO GROWING MORE WIDESPREAD

EL PASO, March 13.—President Diaz's proclamation of semi-martial law has made the situation in the Mexican revolt more serious than ever.

It has not frightened the Insurrectos. It has spurred them to more activity. Northern Chihuahua is to-day seething with the flame of revolt, and the insurrectos are on the move everywhere in the province. It is now, "No quarter" on both sides.

At Agua Prieta, near the Arizona border, General Blanco, one of the Revolto leaders, who has been leading the Federals a chase for more than a week with his force of 500 men, suddenly broke cover and attempted to draw the Federals under Colonel Mora into a trap that would have meant the annihilation or surrender of Mora's 300 men. There was a brief but sharp skirmish, in which thirty-five were killed or wounded on both sides, but Mora saw the trap in time and refused to enter it. Blanco's plan was simple in its strategy. He deployed part of his cavalry from a canon at Genisis Springs and they moved in open order on the town of Agua Prieta. They advanced through swampy ground and then moved steadily toward the Federal forces, which were coming from the town.

Mora, who had with him the Thirteenth and Twenty-seventh Infantry of the line and thirty Rurales, mounted, advanced his men in line of battle and halted them at 800 yards from the advancing Insurrectos. When Blanco's men had advanced to within 500 yards the Federals poured several volleys at them.

The Insurrectos returned the fire and after a few moments began to retreat, however, in good order. Mora at first gave the order to advance, but the steadiness and good formation which the Revoltos preserved made him suspect the retreat was feigned to draw him into a pursuit and trap his forces in the swampy ground near the ravine, in which he would have been at the mercy of Blanco's troops. He halted the pursuit and, as the Insurrectos continued to retreat, moved his men back to Agua Prieta.

Honest Advice to Consumptives

Somehow there exists a vast amount of skepticism as to the possibility of curing Consumption. . . . We state none but facts, and are sincere in what we assert. . . . If ourselves afflicted with Tuberculosis, we should do precisely what we ask others to do—take Eckman's Alterative promptly and faithfully. . . . The reason we should do this, and warrant we have for asking all Consumptives to take it, is that we have the reports of many cures, one of which follows:

1819 Susquehanna Ave., Phila., Pa:

Gentlemen: "For two years I was afflicted with hemorrhages of the lungs, the number totalled nearly one hundred. Our family physician advised another climate, as to remain would probably be fatal; however, I remained, and in February of 1902, I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house I was left with a frightful hacking cough, which no medicine I had taken could alleviate. I was again advised to go to another part of the country. It was at this time March, 1902, that I learned of Eckman's Alterative. In a short time my cough was gone and I was pronounced 'well' or 'cured.' Since that time I have had two slight attacks of pneumonia and I have resorted to no other medicine to effect a cure.

"I am at present in excellent health and feel that as long as I can obtain Eckman's Alterative I have no fear of Consumption. I cannot speak too highly for the good it has done."

That Feeling Of Fullness

Disappears in Five Minutes After Taking a Stuart's Dyspgpsia Tablet.

A Trial Package Sent Free On Request.

All of the unpleasant sensations attendant upon eating too heartily are instantly relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. Like sticking a pin into a rubber balloon. The reason is simple and easy to understand.

Inflation Of The Stomach From Undigested Food Quickly Relieved By A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

When you take food into a stomach that is tired and overtaxed the gastric juices do not form fast enough to digest it properly. So the food becomes sour and at once begins to throw off gases. Your stomach becomes inflated just as surely as if you attached a toy balloon to a gas jet. Then the gases and foul odors issue forth and pollute your breath, making you an object of nausea to your friends. Your tongue quickly becomes coated and you can taste the foulness that is within you.

Now all this condition is changed almost instantly by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. This little digester goes busy at once—supplies all the digestive juices that were lacking—digests the food in a jiffy and opens up the clogged stomach and bowels. It also sweetens and refreshes the mucous lining of the stomach and bowels and restores peace and content.

If you give Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a chance they will not only sweeten your stomach, but also your disposition, and you will never have another stomach ill.

One grain of a single ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This saves your stomach and gives it the rest it needs. All muscles require occasional rest if they are ever overtaxed. The stomach is no exception to this rule.

Try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will wonder how you ever got along without them. They are sold at 50 cents by all druggists everywhere. A trial package will be sent free on request to F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

The American Contest Editor

Requests each Candidate in the great

$35,000.00 Prize Competition

to read carefully the rules and conditions of the Contest, which are reprinted here. A thorough understanding of these rules will avoid a huge amount of unneccesary inconvenience for the Contest Department and also for both Candidates and Subscribers.

Rules of Contest!

This contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, irrespective of age, except employes of the AMERICAN and their families.

All contestants must be legal residents of New England.

Vote coupons from the Daily or Sunday AMERICAN will count in this contest. A vote coupon will appear in each issue of the AMERICAN (daily and Sunday) during the life of this contest which will be good for one vote daily and 10 votes Sunday.

The one who receives the largest number of votes, irrespective of districts, will be awarded the capital prize.

The ones who receive the largest number of votes in each district will be awarded the prizes as scheduled. In the event of total votes for any contestants who win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

Each vote coupon will be valueless after two weeks from the date printed in the AMERICAN.

The Contest Editor's decision will be final on any question which may arise.

All mail matter sent to the Contest Department should be addressed to the AMERICAN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, P. O. Box 227, Boston, Mass.

Many packages of ballots have been received with insufficient stamps affixed. Hereafter such packages will not be accepted.

The contest began Sunday, January 15th, 1911, and will end at 10 p. m., June 15th, 1911.

A vote credit will be allowed for subscriptions turned in for the Sunday AMERICAN (subscriptions to the daily AMERICAN will not be received).

No Sunday subscriptions for less than six months' period will be received.

The AMERICAN will not be responsible for any subscriptions sent in through the mails in any form other than postoffice money order, express order or certified check. Cash sent through the mails will be sent at the risk of the person sending it.

You do not have to collect subscriptions in advance, but as an evidence of good faith each Sunday AMERICAN subscription turned in must be accompanied by a small cash GUARANTEE payment as follows:

Length of Subscription	Guarantee Required	Vote Credit
6 Months	25 Cents	500
1 Year	50 Cents	1,500
2 Years	100 Cents	3,500
3 Years	100 Cents	5,000

The guaranteed payment, in each case, will apply on the LAST part of the terms of each subscription—subscribers must begin to pay for the paper immediately, beginning with your newsdealer's first delivery, at his regular delivery rate. The guarantee payments DO NOT apply until the LATTER part of the subscription term. For instance, if you have subscribed for three years and paid the $1.00 guarantee required with a three years' subscription, at the end of your term of subscription you will not have to pay for the last dollar's worth of papers.

After subscriptions are received at Contest Headquarters, a letter is sent to EACH PERSON WHO SUBSCRIBES, which will contain two printed forms—one the AMERICAN'S order on any newsdealer to begin delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN immediately to the subscriber whose name is written on this newsdealer's order. The other—a return postal card, which each subscriber should have the newsdealer sign and return at once to Contest Department. Until this postal card is returned by the newsdealer, no credit for the subscriptions will be given to the contestant. Take these two forms at once to any newsdealer you may select—leave the order with him, have him fill in the blank spaces provided on the postal card, and mail postal back to the Contest Department at the earliest possible moment.

Contestants should see that all subscription blanks are carefully filled in and written plainly and legibly with every blank space provided on subscription blank filled in properly—except the No....... in the upper left-hand corner of each subscription blank, which should be left unfilled for the use of the Contest Department.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the AMERICAN.

Votes should be sent in tied together in bundles of 100. All contestants are requested to use a rubber stamp with contestant's name and address. Only the top three or four coupons in each bundle of 100 need be stamped, but all bundles of 100 should be enclosed in an OUTSIDE WRAPPER, with name, address and DISTRICT NUMBER of each candidate stamped on wrapper.

The AMERICAN reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise.

HOSE STIFLES CAMORRA RIOT

VITERBO, March 13.—While members of the Neapolitan Camorra were fighting in their cells in the monastery prison to-day, government officers under the direction of Cavalieri Bianchi, judge of the Assize Court, continued their hunt for jurors. Though the box was filled on Saturday several later refused to serve and five more were excused to-day when Cavalieri Santoro, the King's counsel, learned that they were closely affiliated with the Camorra.

The panel probably will be completed to-morrow, as eighteen of those who had fled in fear of vengeance have promised to return upon promise of complete protection and pay of 90 cents a day.

A riot which was precipitated in the jail to-day when Maria Standardo, the only woman among the prisoners, taunted Alfano, the leader, and his cellmates for having failed to kill Giovanni Abatemaggio, their betrayer. When the prisoners were taken into the corridors for their daily exercise a free-for-all fight resulted, which was quelled only when the fire department turned a hose on the rioters and drove them back into their cells. There the fighting continued until the firemen were again called in and nearly drowned the combatants.

Father Vitozzi, the guardian angel of the Camorra, is seriously ill. It is said that he took poison smuggled to him by a bribed soldier.

A great sensation was caused by the appearance in court of Professor Murri and his daughter Linda. Years ago the Professor, who is now serving a long sentence at the local penitentiary, was convicted of murdering his daughter's husband. It is expected that his testimony will reveal many astonishing things.

Of the thirty-nine on trial only one is a woman. She was one of the calmest prisoners in court. She is Maria Standardo, who is accused of harboring members of the Camorra in Naples, where she owns a hotel, and sharing in their counsels for assassinations.

The defendants are members of the Catholic faith and they expressed a desire to attend mass before the opening of court. Accordingly a priest entered the monastery prison and chanted a mass while the Neapolitans knelt and murmured prayers for their own deliverances. Many of them expressed a desire for communion and this likewise was granted. From their prayers the prisoners went to trial.

Faces Dull and Forbidding.

To the foreigner this battle of life and death presents strange contrasts. It was hard to realize to-day, for instance, that in the faces of the motley array of prisoners there was anything of the Camorra we associate with Italy, even in her crimes.

No, their faces were dull, forbidding; one feels no sympathy. It is hard to realize that the Camorra has such a following, until one comes to its groundwork—fear.

No betrayer of its secrets ever escapes. The vendetta is omnipresent, seemingly omniscient. Therefore, the Camorrists say in their souls: "Let us be silent and we may escape the law; if we speak, nothing can save us from the Mafia."

No chances are being taken. The prisoners are well guarded. It will go hard with any who attempt to rescue them.

Several times a day the jailers test the iron bars of the windows of the mediaeval monastery of Gradi, where the accused, with the exception of two, are imprisoned; and a strong force of carbineers scrutinize the throngs that visit the place. Every one wishes to inspect the Gradi and this is permitted under police surveillance. It is a gloomy structure, located not far from the spot where, in July, 1155, Pope Hadrian IV., the Englishman Nicholas Breakspeare, compelled Frederick I., as his vassal, to hold his stirrup.

Law Must Again Rule.

Thirty-nine of the prisoners are confined here. The spy accuser, Abbetemaggio, and Maria Stepardo, wife of one of the alleged actual assassins of the Cuocolos, are kept in San Laparo prison.

Verily these are times when law must rule. The Italian government knew it must have a specific charge against the Camorra. This charge is the murder of the Cuocolo couple in Naples in the early Summer of 1906. It presents infinite possibilities, for, although the crime was actually perpetrated by only six men, there are those who ordered the crime, who planned it and who assisted the actual murderers; there are others who had a guilty knowledge and who still preserve that knowledge according to the Code of Silence—omerta; others have disregarded this code, and to them the government looks for its most vital evidence.

Altogether there are about fifty prisoners and nearly one thousand witnesses. In the years that have passed since the Neapolitan murder, many of those concerned have been tried and convicted for other crimes, so that whichever way you look at it, the Duca di Nola, Count Enzo Ravaschieri, the Archbishop of Naples, and other respectable witnesses will find themselves in strange company at Viterbo.

GARAGE AND AUTO DESTROYED BY FIRE

A one-and-a-half-story wooden building at the rear of No. 41 Van Winkle street, Dorchester, owned by Horace L. Crane and used by him as a garage and storehouse, was destroyed by fire early to-day with a five-passenger touring car and a large quantity of household effects stored in the building. The loss is estimated at $2,500. What caused the blaze is not known. Half an hour after Mr. Crane had driven the machine into the garage, his wife was awakened by a slight explosion and discovered the fire. The firemen were notified by telephone, and when District Chief Heffernan arrived with the crew of Engine 40 he ordered an alarm sounded.

ROBBED AFTER BEING DRUGGED

John Seonphere of No. 9 Charter street has reported last night that he was robbed in his home, yesterday, under unusual circumstances. He said that while he was preparing food for a caller the later threw some substance in his face, which produced unconsciousness and when he revived his watch and chain and money were missing. The police are investigating.

ELECTRICIANS ARE BEING ORGANIZED

Following a conference at Wells Memorial building between representatives of seventeen unions of that craft, in which every section of the State was represented, it was stated that the electrical workers of Lynn, Salem and vicinity are almost organized under the banner of the A. F. of L. Union. The electrical workers declare that they will now take up the question of unionizing Marlboro.

FOUND GUILTY OF ATTACKING GIRL

John E. Golden of Wellesley was found guilty to-day by Judge Oliver in the Dedham District Court of attacking Miss Stella E. Meek, a domestic employed by G. S. Reed of Livermore road, Wellesley. Golden was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction, but appealed and was held in $500 for the Superior Court.

FLAMES DRIVE OUT FAMILY.

Louis Lipman and his family, who occupy a tenement on the third floor of the wooden dwelling house at No. 226 Paris street, East Boston, were driven from their home yesterday by fire. The damage to Lipman's furniture and to the building, which is owned by Jacob Nasonson, was less than $150.

RED SOX WILL EXTEND THEIR STAY IN FRISCO

By MERTON E. BURKE.

American Correspondent with Red Sox on "Coast-to-Coast" Tour.

Merton E. Burke.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—John I. Taylor's all-star Red Sox bunch are so much in love with Frisco, the livest wire they have struck yet, that they will remain in town three days more and play off some of those postponed games. The Red Sox are pulling time. The boys of the Golden Gate city have taken them in and given them the best time ever. Midsummer crowds on a keen edge of baseball fever turned out to see the boys trim Oakland yesterday morning 7 to 5, and San Francisco in the afternoon 5 to 1, and the Bostonians warmed up to a fine exhibition of the fine art of the great American game. Fully 4,000 were at the Oakland game, and 8,000 at Frisco.

Manager Donovan, accordingly, is loath to move out of this hustling town to play the schedule of unimportant games in smaller places. The washout of tracks and bridges on the coast line between Los Angeles and San Francisco has made it necessary to cancel the Yanigans' schedule for Ventura, and Portland at Santa Maria. Bill Carrigan's colts will accordingly be shunted to the Valley Railroad line and [illegible] the Modesto, Stanford and [illegible] dates.

Close up Shop to See Game.

Late yesterday it developed that the Carrigan division could not reach Modesto in time to play. Manager Donovan will [illegible] up a team down from here to fill the vacancy. The small towns simply close up shop and go to the game when there's one on and have been shouting for the Sox for so long that the management would not like to disappoint them.

To-day, while not [illegible] shooting baseball teams to various points of the map to add laurels to Boston fame, Manager Donovan will continue to juggle his long list of players to decide who shall go South and who shall return to Boston via the northern route. He has a hard task on his hands.

Of course, many of the Reds have tourists inclinations and would like to see Reno, Salt Lake, Pike's Peak and Denver. But we are out here to produce some ball players and the Southern warmth is what they need, so that the regulars and promising recruits will go home via Texas.

For Southern Trip.

Donovan has not fully decided whom he will take South, but from little things I hear, I wouldn't be surprised to see Janvrin, Karger, Collins, Frank Smith, Charles Smith and Engle transferred from Carrigan's division to the Southern squad. Just enough of old reliables will be sent North to ensure a well-manned four.

The games here have been most enlightening, regarding the ability of several unknown quantities on the roster. Pierce, Hunt, Killilay, Wood, Arellanes and Pape have been given a little training in the box.

Killilay has a unique delivery. His motions would indicate he was going to bowl the ball, then he swings into a deliberate curve that generates a high speed ball. He is a very quiet chap and says little about himself, but his work speaks for him. Thomas, behind the bat, is a handy youngster. He's a heavy hitter, too, and is a live wire. He ought to make the team.

The working out of Nebinger at third and some things I heard lead me to think he will be seen at Huntington avenue this year.

Williams is another man to be reckoned with as catcher. He may be tried at first, too. He's a busy player and coaches the team into live work whenever on the job. He's the warm-up kid all right.

Harry Hooper was presented a pair of diamond cuff links by his St. Mary's College chums. Tris Speaker, who had been laid up with a cold and a slight attack of tonsilitis, is now up and about.

Duffy Lewis is the grandstand hero in this burg. All the fans and fanettes remember his playing here before. He gets a glad hand every time up. Members of squad had been invited into the mysteries of the "Turkey Trot," the "Grizzly Bear," the "Honey Hug" and the "Huggy Dug" during their stay here. Maybe thats one reason why they hate to leave this place and return to somnolent Redondo.

Weather frisky.

Business Success Through Publicity

No 78.

Advertising Bent Wire

A piece of wire bent in a peculiar shape, with a slight hump in the middle, swept the country some years ago. It is still most popular. Many a man has taken a piece of wire and bent it into an advantageous shape, but no man up to the instance in question has pushed his good fastener through every form of publicity until the goods became known to every woman in America.

The value of the name of the fastener is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, all created by the power of publicity in establishing a good will for an excellent commodity.

There is many a manufacturer of wire goods in the market who has the same opportunity. Every kitchen uses wire goods in some form or another, and yet there is hardly a utensil that has been forced to the attention of the housewife by proper advertising. It is just as feasible to create a demand for desirable kitchen utensils under a trade-marked name as it is possible to create a demand for flour, crackers or a baking powder under a trade-marked name.

Think of the wide business use an excellent clip has. There is a clip on the market which is simply a piece of bent wire, yet when it is used in one way it is stronger for use in another way. It holds any quantity of paper, is practically indestructible and is easy to adjust.

The manufacturer has never emphasized the particular value to the business man of his clip so that it is used in small quantities instead of the large quantities in which it might be used were it advertised.

Suppose a manufacturer of some form of wire goods should mark his goods and then take the leading papers of New England to emphasize the advantages of his goods in every household. The dealer will naturally desire to carry those goods and the jobber will seek the manufacturer in order to supply the dealer.

The newspaper of great power in the New England field is the Boston American. It can do more to advertise goods than almost any other, because its circulation is so comprehensive. It reaches all sorts and conditions of people and has a circulation of nearly 400,000 daily.

BUSY YEAR FOR WINCHESTER

Winchester High School has a large squad out for the baseball team this year, and for the past two weeks Captain Leduc and Coach Bowles have been working the battery candidates in the school gymnasium.

The pitchers are W. Goddu, Mobbs, Crapster, Downer and Murphy. W. Goddu is the most promising man of this bunch, as he pitched in some of the games last year, and showed good flashes at times.

The catchers are all green men, and the loss of [illegible] means a lot to the team, as his batting and all-around work was [illegible] of last year's nine. These men are Meinke, Marchant, Pennigin and Ball.

The nine will be a member of the Mystic Valley League this year, and with six veterans in line hopes to be in the running for the league leadership. Manager Raymond Strawbridge has arranged a long schedule of eighteen games, the opening game being with Wakefield High at Winchester.

The schedule is:

April 12—Wakefield High at Winchester.
April 15—Lexington High at Winchester.
April 22—Lynn Classical High at Winchester.
April 25—Chelsea High at Chelsea.
April 29—Lynn English High at Winchester.
May 3—Medford High at Medford.
May 6—Woburn High at Winchester.
May 10—Arlington High at Arlington.
May 13—Reading High at Winchester.
May 17—Stoneham High at Winchester.
May 19—Lynn English High at Lynn.
May 20—M. I. T. Sophomores at Winchester.
May 27—Chelsea High at Winchester.
June 3—Arlington High at Winchester.
June 7—Woburn High at Woburn.
June 10—Stoneham High at Stoneham.
June 13—Reading High at Reading.

AMERICAN TENNIS PLAYERS TO ENGLAND

American lawn tennis players of the top rank will invade the English courts this season. That was the startling news received from London. Not only Americans but also Australians and South Africans, the challenging nations for the Dwight F. Davis international cup, are scheduled for the All-English championship at Wimbledon next June.

William A. Larned, the national champion; Maurice E. McLoughlin, Thomas C. Bundy and Melville Hammond Long will make up the American forces, according to these advices.

WILL PLAY OUTDOORS.

Many of the school baseball squads will get outdoors this week. They have been at work in gymnasiums and drill halls for two weeks, and if the weather is suitable the coaches will send them through outdoor training stunts this week.

CHAMPIONS OF FLEET.

HAVANA, March 13.—The baseball championship of the Atlantic fleet was decided when the nine from the Nebraska defeated the North Dakotas by 10 to 0.

BOXING NEWS AND GOSSIP

The members of the Armory A. A. will be entertained by a slashing bill to-morrow evening. The feature bout between Benny Kaufman of Philadelphia and Young Dyson should be a hummer. Bill McKinnon tackles Jumbo Wells, while Billy Nixon takes on Joe Ferguson in the other two bouts.

The "big noise" in the boxing world this week is the ten-round bout at the Fairmount A. C. of New York, Tuesday, between Packey McFarland and Owen Moran, the little English lightweight. Both men will weigh in at 135 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Sam Langford, the "Boston Tar Baby," will have to wait a week longer before he can get a crack at Sam McVey. The real cause of the postponement of the bout was to allow McVey to get in better shape before he tackles the Boston Negro.

Kid Scaler, who was substituted for Kid Goodman against A. J. Duffy at the Hyde Park A. C. to-night, will find the Jamaica Plain boy a hard nut. The bout will go ten rounds, with two good preliminaries.

A ten-round bout between Ad Wolgast and One Round Hogan has been practically clinched by the Madison A. C. of New York. The boys will box ten rounds at the Harlem River Park on the evening of April 18.

After the bout with Frankie Burns, at the National Sporting Club of America on March 31, Abe Attell will go after K. O. Brown, the two-headed New Yorker, the weight to be 133 pounds, ringside.

Owen Moran, the little English claimant to the lightweight title, refuses to fight in his own country. He says that the only way that he can win a bout in his native country is to knock his opponent out.

Charley Harvey is hot on the trail of Matt Wells, who recently defeated Freddy Welsh for the lightweight title of England. Harvey is trying to arrange a match between his man, Owen Moran and Wells for McIntosh's Olympia.

Ad Wolgast arrived in Los Angeles Saturday and immediately started in training for his bout with with George Memsic, which will be held here St. Patrick's Day.

Sandy Ferguson, the Chelsea "Bad Boy," has been matched to meet Andy Morris of East Boston in a ten-round bout at Portland next Saturday evening.

Joe Jeanette will make his last appearance in America for some time when he clashes with Jim Barry at the National Sporting Club on Thursday night. Joe will fight Sam McVey and Sam Langford while abroad.

Promoter Carey of the Los Angeles A. C. is trying to arrange a twenty-five-round bout on the coast between Knockout Brown and Ad Wolgast. Wolgast has not yet come to terms.

Frank Moran, the Pittsburg heavyweight and Jim Savage of New Jersey will meet in the main bout at the Olympia to-night. After the bout Moran will sail for Paris.

Who's Who IN SPORT

THOMAS M. WELSH—No. 65.

Thomas M. Welsh, proprietor of the Summer street bowling alleys of Natick, is one of the best bowlers in town and is a good all-around sport; has only recently been located in Natick, being formerly proprietor of Les Miserables Alleys of Lowell. He is also a K. of C. man.

ARMY OFFICERS IN HORSE RACE

A very attractive novelty is the offering by the racing stewards of the Country Club, Brookline, of two stakes, for horses of the United States Army or any branch of the government service, at the annual meeting at the Clyde Park course in June.

The stipulations for the two events are first, that one race shall be upon the flat, distance one and a half miles, and which has been christened "The Lexington." The second stake is for steeplechasers, distance two miles, and has been titled "The Bunker Hill."

Officers of the United States Army, in full uniform, must ride in each event, as one of the conditions of the stakes. Both stakes should prove a very attractive novelty at the annual country club races, and provide much interest among the officers of the Army service.

There is certain to be a fine entry made by the officers stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, and who are at present building a handsome race course within their preserves, and there should also be a good entry from Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

It is probable that noted Army commanders will be invited to serve with the judges during the racing of these stakes at the Country Club, and some excellent sport should be seen, because there is many an excellent Army mount, to-day, both upon the flat and over the steeplechase jumps, which had his first schooling upon American race tracks, and which was sold into the Army service, when the present hostility against the running horse began, under the late regime of Governor Hughes in New York.

DARTMOUTH 1913 GAMES.

HANOVER, N. H., March 13.—The Dartmouth freshmen football schedule for the Fall of 1911 is as follows:

Sept. 30, Williston at Hanover; Oct. 7, Exeter at Exeter; Oct. 14, Cushing at Hanover; Oct. 21, Worcester at Worcester; Oct. 28, Andover at Hanover; Nov. 4, Dean at Franklin; Nov. 11, Hebron at Hanover.

BABY NAMED 'TY COBB.'

ERIN, Tenn., March 13.—The first baby born this year in Erin was christened Ty Cobb, in honor of Detroit's great player. Daniel Cobb and Mrs. Cobb, the parents, claim no relation with the only Tyrus.

HARVARD SQUAD ON THE DIAMOND

By E. V. B. PARKE.

With any kind of favoring glances from old Sol to-day, Coach Sexton expects to get his baseball proteges at Harvard out in the open for a little scampering over the young green blades which are beginning to stick their heads from beneath the sod on Soldiers Field, thus giving the men a taste of real baseball.

It looks like a pretty certain thing now that Captain McLaughlin will be elected to the third base, to fill the big gap made when Lanigan, last year's leader, graduated, and made strides for the "hard cruel world." McLaughlin is a clever man at any infield position and Coach Sexton expects him to hold down the third sack in major league style, and also give much strength to the batting order.

"Dick" Lewis, the football player, is at present clinging to the initial sack and doing himself proud. His height gives him great reach and allows him to cover a great amount of ground, which will be of value in this position. In addition, as has been before said, he is a clever man with the willow, something Harvard has lacked badly lately.

Second base is a foregone conclusion for Potter, the man who held the job last year, while the back stop lies between Reeves and the two freshmen catchers last year. McKay, the big tackle, is making the fur fly in the box, and is developing a goodly selection of curves, which are made more formidable by his ability to speed them up. Felton is still on "prob," and Bartholf and Hardy, two freshmen pitchers last year, are showing up well.

Short is giving the most trouble, Carr, Lowrey and Winston, the bidders for this job, all being fair fielders, but at the same time weak with the stick, while as has been stated, Carr dearly loves to hurl the ball into eternity on his throws to first and home.

Rogers, a regular fielder last year, and a fast man around the bases, and occasionally a good swatter; Kelley, a sub, Wigglesworth, the quarter, a member of his freshmen nine in the outfield, are all strong bidders for the garden jobs. Coon and Clifford, the latter a former Arlington High player and a good all round man, are also promising men, and by their presence permit one to conclude that Harvard's outfield should be fairly strong this year, especially with the stick, which after all is the chief requisite of the outfielder.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Forsythe, the young Giant infield recruit, who recently sent his signed contract to Secretary Gray, is in St. Louis. He is some billiard and pool shark, and has been cleaning up on the best amateurs of the Mound City. Forsythe hails from Illinois, but he is already on his way to Marlin Springs, Texas. He has a touch of rheumatism and wishes to get rid of it before the squad reports. Forsythe has communicated with Mr. Gray for transportation from St. Louis to the training camp.

Governor John K. Tener, of Pennsylvania, recently inaugurated at Harrisburg, was for five years one of the leading pitchers of the National League. He played with Cap. Anson's famous Chicagos. Tener retired from the game in 1890 to enter the banking business in Charleroi. Since then many honors have been showered upon Mr. Tener. He held the office of grand exalted ruler of the Elks and later went to Congress.

Charles Comiskey, who gallantly declined his customary training trip on the Pacific coast in favor of John I. Taylor, has anounced his Spring exhibition dates as folows: March 14 and 15, Waco; March 16 and 17, Fort Worth; March 18 and 19, Dallas. Of course these practice games will be supplemented by the customary barnstorming exhibitions as the White Sox move from Texas to Chicago.

Fogel has thirty-nine men on his reserve list, and he plans to take them all to Birmingham on February 28. His cast includes eighteen pitchers, three catchers, nine infielders and a like number of outfielders. Horace will have considerable whittling to do before May 15, when the twenty-five roster limit comes into effect.

Arthur Devlin says that if one of the young pitchers of the Giants develops sufficiently to win half his games the coming season, McGraw will surely cop the pennant next Fall. Devlin picks the Phillies to be most troublesome. He rates the Pirates a good third, but thinks that the Cubs will have to hustle to keep in the first division.

Fred Westervelt of Washington has a position with President J. H. Farrell, of the New York State League. Westervelt will umpire. He has worked in the Texas, Virginia and South Atlantic leagues. Westervelt is said to be in line for a National League berth. Tom Lynch will keep an eye on him this Summer.

President George Moreland, of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League, is in East Liverpool, Ohio, urging the citizens to retain their franchise in his circuit. A mass meeting will be held in the town hall Thursday night when an effort will be made to have the town folk raise the funds necessary to finance this year's club.

Roger Bresnahan has finally explained why he sold Catcher Eddie Phelps to the Eastern League. Bresnahan declares that he will catch as many games as George Gibson, of the Pirates, the coming season. Rog figures, evidently, that he is catching staff enough.

Fred Clarke will take thirty-three players to Hot Springs. Of this number seventeen are pitchers. The leader of the Buccaneers is bent on securing a reliable pitching staff. He should be able to dig out a few live wires from such an array of talent. With good pitching the Pirates might have beaten the Cubs last season.

Joe York, a native of New York but recently of Cleveland, O., during the Winter months, has accepted terms to officiate in the Western League the coming season. York was an umpire in the O. and P. League in 1910, and was one of the best regarded of the staff.

"Bob" Messenger, the outfielder, and W. R. Jones, the first baseman, from the St. Joe (Western League) club, have signed with the White Sox.

RUSTLERS HAVE DAY OF REST IN AUGUSTA

By R. W. LARDNER.

American correspondent with the Rustlers on Augusta tour.

R. W. Lardner.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 13.—If ever a day's rest was welcome, yesterday's was to the Rustlers. They weren't required to do a particle of work and the holiday gave their weary muscles and bones a chance to return to the normal state. Therefore, it was a peppery crowd that Manager Tenney led out to the ball yard this morning. Wilbur Goode, the recent sufferer from mumps, arrived on the scene, looking just as if it had never happened. The gang was glad to see Wilbur, even his rivals for an outfield job giving him a cordial welcome. Naturally he hasn't been able to do any work, but his cheeks were the only part of his body that was too fat and they returned to their regular size when the mumps kissed him good-by.

The athletes had a variety of ways of enjoying their day's vacation. Doc Miller said he got up early and went to church, but his room-mate, Sam Frock, wouldn't support this statement. Some of the Rustlers really did invade places of worship. Others rode on their beds until noon. Bill Parson was one of these. Manager Tenney took a crowd of scribes for an automobile ride in the afternoon.

Declined Auto Trip.

Another ride, arranged by two automobile demonstrators, was passed up by the athletes. They were cordially invited, but the schedule didn't appeal to them. It called for a journey by motor to Savannah yesterday morning, a distance of 135 miles, over roads that are sand part of the way and plain dust the rest. Then, when you got there, if you did, you purchased a railroad ticket and a Pullman berth back here to Augusta and spent last night on the train. It isn't hard to see why the invitation was declined with thanks.

Herman Young and Bill Parson entertained the guests of the hotel with vocal solos in the parlor after the evening meal. Arthur Butler added to the occasion with nifty stunts on the piano. Charley Herzog reported that his feet were fit again and that he wuld set a warm pace for any one who wanted his job at shortstop.

Down on Bill Sweeney.

The town's one photographer is peeved, and the object of the peeve is Bill Sweeney. You know Bill has been taking pictures of the athletes and cutting in on the local artist's business. The other day the Augusta man lined up the Rustlers at the park and snapped them in a group. When he developed the picture he found that Bill Sweeney had moved. He was angry and became more so when everybody to whom he tried to sell the photograph called attention to Sweeney's blurred likeness. Worst came to worst, when Doc Miller hinted in the photographer's presence that Bill had moved purposely. This so worked up the wrath of the Augustan that he said he believed Sweeney would break his camera if he had a chance. Therefore, Bill is in danger of bodily injury at the hands of the Southerner and goes about wearing a coat of mail under his uniform.

Manager Tenney announced that Peaches Graham had not yet put his name on the bottom of a contract. Peaches announced the same thing, so there is no reason to doubt it. Peaches isn't satisfied, but the club's manager says he will have to be, as there isn't a chance in the world that he will figure in a trade.

The Rustlers have been notified that they will play a game with Jimmy McAleer's team in Washington on April 7. They were to have had the 7th and 8th there according to McAleer's booking, but President Noyes didn't know about it and dated Brooklyn for those two days. The compromise resulted, each of the two National League teams getting one day.

Bill Collins, our poet, worked half an hour on the following, which he declares is his masterpiece to date:

We had one good outfielder in the year of nineteen-ten.
He was one good outfield, but was made up of three men.
Doc Miller was a part of him, a good big part of that.
For Doc was surely handy with big,
long pole or bat.
Liz Beck, he was another part, for Lizzie sure could throw.
And then, yours truly, Collins, was a real speed boy, you know.
With Collins's speed and Beck's strong arm and Miller's batting eye,
We had one good outfielder, that's the truth, I hope to die.

STAR CANADIAN TEAM COMING

Two big Canadian games are on the card for the hockey fans this week, the Amherst Ramblers of Nova Scotia coming here on Wednesday night to play the Victorians, the crack local team, and on Saturday night the Montreal A. A. will make the trip to face the Boston Hockey Club. These two games should furnish some of the best hockey sport of the season, as they are celebrated teams in their own country and will force the home sevens to go their limit to win out.

The visit of the Amherst Ramblers is of special interest to all the Maritime Provinces, for it's the best team they have in that locality, winning the Starr trophy this year over the Crescents and Wanderers, the other Halifax clubs, besides putting to rout numerous other opponents in the Halogonian country.

Some idea of the strength of the Ramblers can be secured from comparison with the Crescents, who played the M. I. T. and Boston Hockey clubs here, winning from the first named team by a spurt in the second period and gave the classy Boston seven the greatest battle of the Winter before acknowledging defeat. The friends of the Ramblers up in Nova Scotia raised a hubbub over the act of the Crescents posing as the best team from that end of the Dominion, and ever since have been pressing the cause of the Amherst boys to journey to the Hub and show the people here what they really can produce in the way of great hockeyists.

According to Montreal reports the Montreal A. A. team that plays Boston on Saturday night is one of the fiercest fighting teams on the ice, and will reflect credit on the former Montreal citizens who will attend the match. This organization is similar to the Boston A. A. and other leading athletic associations in the United States and will prove a big intercity attraction.

CALLAHAN TO SUCCEED DUFFY NEXT YEAR

CHICAGO, March 13.—James J. Callahan is to be crowned manager of the White Sox for the second time in his career in 1912, according to the gossip here. Report has it that he will succeed Duffy when the latter's two years' contract expires.

Those responsible for the report hint at this received from the training camp at Mineral Wells, in which it is intimated that Jimmy's joining the White Sox squad this Spring as a player will result in a stipend more substantial than that received by the ordinary fielder and that it will not be so very long before he directs affairs.

OLD BROOM STICK GAVE MORAN START IN RING

OWEN MORAN

Owen Moran, the clever English lightweight, and the only fighter that ever sent the great Batting Nelson down for the count, will clash with Packey McFarland the stockyards champion to-morrow night at the National Sporting Club in New York.

Moran attributes his present pugilistic rating to an old broom stick, just a common, ordinary one like mother used to wield.

Story of the Stick.

In speaking about his debut in the ring at his training quarters at Lakewood, N. J. yesterday the aspirant for the laurels of Ad Wolgast sprung the following story:

"An old sawed-off broomstick was responsible for my entering the professional ranks as a boxer.

"It was this way. I'd been hanging around the boxing booths just outside Birmingham, my home town, and soon got the idea I could do a bit of fighting.

"I was sixteen then, and I'd been working at the steamfitters' trade for a couple of years. Turning threads on big iron pipes had given me fine muscular development.

"One afternoon I went on for three rounds with the 108-pound champion. 'turned him up' in two rounds and took the £1 offered to the man who succeeded in staying three rounds.

"That evening amateur bouts were being held at Worcester, ten miles away, and I returned home to ask my mother's permission to enter the tournament.

The "Old Medicine Stick."

"She didn't know that I was fighting—and here's where that broomstick comes in. Mother reached behind the door, grabbed that old medicine stick (as I called it) and walloped me good.

"'You'll do no fightin' here; I'll do all that's to be done in this family,' said my mother.

"However, the whipping didn't keep me indoors that night. Just as soon as things had quieted down below I slipped out of the window and away.

"I walked to Worcester, and my first opponent went out in the second round, for which I received a gold watch.

"The next day I sold the watch. There were more amateur bouts that night and I asked the manager to put me on. I knocked out four little fellows, and when I went to get the watches the manager demanded that I show the one I'd won the evening before.

"When I explained to him that I'd sold it he declared me a professional and held out the four prizes I'd won.

Gave Cash to Mother.

"Then I started after the money, and like Knockout Brown, dumped it into my mother's lap. For a while she stormed and brought that broomstick into play, but eventually it went into the closet for good.

BIG STAKES FOR READVILLE MEET

Although he has given an option upon the Readville race track and grounds to a Boston syndicate, Andrew J. Welch, the owner of the famous two-minute racing course out beneath the Blue Hills, it is announced, will go ahead with the preparations for the annual Grand Circuit meeting here, the same as if there had been no negotiations made for the sale of the property.

It is declared that the option upon the track and grounds, expired in February, and was then renewed for a term of ninety days. At its next expiration, however, it will be too late to open the early closing events at Readville, with the hope of obtaining a commanding list of entries and of securing satisfactory returns, so Mr. Welch will take the initatory steps in the arrangement of the Grand Circuit program and entries, for the early closing events will close some time in April.

S. M. Klotz, who served as assistant secretary at Readville last season, will again co-operate with Mr. Welch, in the arrangement of the program, announcement of which will be made at an early date.

SHEA IN TRIM TO MEET MARTIN

The Queen City A. C. of Manchester, N. H. offers a swell card for next Wednesday night. An all-star show has been arranged, which consists of three excellent ten-round bouts between six of the best boys in New England. Kid Shea, the clever and hard hitting South Boston welterweight and Terry Martin now of Manchester will clash in one of the bouts, and it should be a corker.

Shea is the sensation of the New England boxing world to-day. His recent wins over Frank Perron, Jimmy Moriarty, Dave Deshler and Honey Mellody have made the fans, promoters, and boxers all sit up and take notice. The boy from the Peninsula district bids fair to clean up everything in his class. He will be given a thorough test by Martin, however. He is in tip top condition and feels cocksure that he will check Shea's winning streak.

Johnny Glover and Jeff Doherty are another pair on the bill who should furnish a dandy scrap. Glover is wonderfully clever, while Doherty is a human fighting machine. If this bout goes the limit Glover should win, but there are many who doubt that it will go the limit.

Johnny Gallant and Nap Dufresne will meet in the other bout. They are both Frenchmen and are very popular in State. Dufresne claims he is the featherweight champion of Canada. Gallant says he is not and will prove it when the bell rings for them to clash. They are both good punchers and their bout should be full of fireworks. Many Boston, Lawrence, Nashua, Concord, Laconia, and Dover fans will journey to Manchester to see this show.

HANS WAGNER LEAVES TO JOIN PIRATES

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 13.—Hans Wagner has left on the Panhandle railroad for Hot Springs. Wagner said he was going directly into training. He said he weighed 200 pounds, which is fifteen pounds below his playing weight.

He said he had kept in good condition all Winter, playing basket ball, and had much outdoor exercise. He would not make any predictions for the Pirates, but said he was going to do the best he could from the start and leave the rest to chance. He was accompanied by his brother, Al Wagner. Hans said:

"If I don't make good this season, I'm a bum, pure and simple."

NICHOLLS, BASEBALL PLAYER, IS DEAD

BALTIMORE, March 13.—Simon Nicholls, short stop and captain of the Baltimore Eastern League baseball club, died at a hospital here to-day. He had been ill for over a week with typhoid fever and an operation was made necessary yesterday.

Prior to coming to Baltimore, Nicholls played successively with the Memphis Southern League and Philadelphia American League clubs.

SPORTS of all SORTS

BY RILEY

THE BOSTON FOLLOWERS OF THE ponies remind me very forcibly of a herd of sheep in a three-acre lot upon a New England farm. Let some one let down the bars, and the little woolly fellows will all wait, until finally the ram bounds over, and then away they all go bounding at full speed. Last Saturday, a Boston business man sent over with one or two friends, a flyer of $1,000, upon Countless, in the third race at Jacksonville. Now T. M. Green and The Nigger, two corkers, were going to the post, both of whom had an age upon Countless, but when the news of that local wager began to be breezed around town the small betters came with a tremendous rush, and it was nothing but get under cover, and take a flyer upon Countless. Well, the race was run, and Countless who was shouldering top weight of 125 pounds, weakened badly in the last quarter, and could only finish third. T. M. Green won in a whip-snorting finish over The Nigger. It is estimated that about $3,000 of Boston money was burned up on Countless.

THE COZY CORNER IN THE ADAMS House lobby looks rather lonesome without the presence of Uncle George W. Leavitt, the best known horseman of New England. The veteran is very busy down in Kentucky, but is not forgetting his friends, to whom he sends very handsome postcards of the Blue Grass country. Mr. Leavitt is managing the service season in Kentucky of Peter B. Bradley's splendid sire, Border Knight, 2:12¼, the only son of Bingen in Kentucky, that is out of a daughter of Peter the Great, and who left Boston for the Blue Grass country at the request of Kentucky breeders of Mr. Leavitt, to select a son of Bingen, and the Readville veteran lost no time in making the selection. Border Knight is one of the finest bred stallions that ever went from here for service, being by Bingen, 2:06¼, first dam Felista by Peter the Great, 2:07¼; second dam, Ollie K., 2:12¾, by King Wilkes, 2:22¼; third dam, Chisalla, by Chichester, and fourth dam, Chinchilla, by Harold.

WORD COMES FROM THE BETTING centres that the wagers upon the meeting of Packey McFarland and Owen Moran, read 100 to 80 in favor of the American boxer. McFarland is down to the required weight of 135 pounds, and will do little work from now until he starts for the Fairmount A. C., New York, the scene of the battle, to-morrow evening. It is but natural that Packey should rule as favorite. He is several inches taller than his British opponent, has a longer reach, and should outweigh Moran. The settlement of the wagers, according to an agreement reached by the sports, will rest in the opinion offered as to the winner, by the boxing editor of a New York morning paper.

CHARLEY FARRELL OF THIS CITY, the "Duke of Marlboro," battery coach of the New York Highlanders, declares he has with him the greatest young pitcher uncovered in years in Harry Ables, late of the Texas League and who will be seen in a Gotham uniform this season. "The Duke" is not apt to tout anything but the real simon-pure article, and the lad must be indeed a wonder to carry Charley's trade-mark so early in the year.

THE SELECTION OF HARRY PAYNE Whitney to captain the Meadowbrook polo team, who will meet Hurlingham, the English challengers, for the international cup, is eminently fitting and proper. Mr. Whitney led the American players grandly in England last Summer when they lifted the cup, and his return to his former position as captain of America's four, will be very pleasing to amateur sportsmen in every part of the country.

JOHN SCOTT—YOUR VERY ENTERtaining letter was much enjoyed. You will doubtless agree that Jack Johnson is a far more finished boxer to-day, than eight years ago, when he twice won from Sam McVey in twenty rounds, and later knocked him out in the same number. Also that Sam Langford, both upon the attack and defence is a more finished boxer and better ring general than McVey.

BIG CY YOUNG TO RETIRE FROM DIAMOND THIS YEAR

Cy Young.

Cy Young, the battle-scarred heaver of the pitching mound, has confided to some of his old-time cronies in Boston, that this is the last year he will cavort on the diamond, and that as a closing stunt of his pitching career of over twenty years he will take up the spitball.

What the old sport should be able to do with his terrific speed, annexed to any sort of command of the spitter, should make his swan song on the pitcher's rubber one sweet iridescent dream of the poetry of motion.

Still, the spitter is not a new wrinkle to Cy, for he has used it to advantage on momentous occasions in his pitching career, namely, when he faced the Boston Nationals in the post-season series of 1896, and by use of the moist ball fanned Fred Tenney four times in succession, to the delirious joy of the fans.

Again he used it to humble the Boston Red Sox on the occasion of his first visit here in a Cleveland uniform, when he had the Boston batters feeding from his hand, and handed them a stinging defeat, to the delight of a great company of friends of the Peoli sage of agriculture and the art of pitching.

Early in the year it was reported that waivers on Cy would be asked by the Cleveland club owners, but when they learned that this was positively Cy's farewell, with no Adelina Patti come-back, the idea was dismissed.

It will be back to the farm—the second largest in Ohio—for Cy, after this season, which many of his friends predict will be a great one, although some of the Cleveland fans have expressed doubts whether or not the old sport would be able to last through the coming playing year.

In any event, Cy Young has turned in one of the greatest feats of pitching, during his twenty-odd years on the diamond, that has ever been known in the history of the game, and he will have a lasting place in the memories of the fans of the country.

OVERALL OUT OF GAME.

PICK DELMONT TO LICK DAVIS

At Delmont, the South End featherweight, who is boxing in his old time form, should be able to take "Happy" Davis of Philadelphia easily into camp, at the Rhode Island A. C. in Thornton, to-night. The boys are to box fifteen rounds and there is a forfeit posted to make 120 pounds at 3 o'clock to-day.

Davis, who is a new comer, has been in Providence some little time preparing for to-night's bout with Delmont, and those sportsmen who have seen him box declare he is a promising boy, but that Delmont should have no very great task to take the measure of the Philadelphian before the end of the slated number of rounds.

Delmont has shown much of his old time speed in recent exhibitions, and seems to be in line for a number of excellent matches. He takes on Young Britt at Baltimore, also this week, the bout being carded for St. Patrick's Day night. The South End boy is in excellent shape for to-night's bout, and rules a strong favorite among the boxing fans. It looks as if Delmont would shade at about 10 to 7, and better, among the sports who gather at Thornton and who delight in laying down a flyer for all the bouts that take place over there.

Manicure Lady Draws Line at College Wits

"I HAD to give the gate to another loon to-day," said the Manicure Lady. "I guess them scientists is right when they claim that everybody is going crazy. I haven't did the nails of a single sane gent since Ash Wednesday.

"I don't know why Providence wishes all the boobs onto me; but if I hear much more of the silly slush I had to listen to this morning, I guess I'll crumple up and die, or else quit the game. I'm getting awful sick of it, George."

"I don't blame you a bit," said the Head Barber, sympathetic for once. "I heard some of the stuff he was spilling, and if I had been you I would have put the soap water bowl right on his dome of thought. That's what!"

"That would have been awful crude, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I was brought up different. But just the same, as the old poet says, there comes a time when patience ceases to be virtuous, and I don't want much more of it.

"Did you pay any particular attention to the boob, while he was talking to me? No? Well, I'm sorry that you didn't get a good slant at his map. It was full of expression, like the face of a sheep.

"He told me that he didn't feel good because he had been to a Greek letter society dinner, some order like the Omega Alfreds, or something like that, and he said that, being college boys, they had went the rounds of the town after the dinner, and he confessed that he got a pretty good start before the thing was over.

"There Are Exceptons"

"'We went to a swell lobster palace,' he says, 'where we had about twenty rounds, and then we went to another down the line. I gave a gent there an argument about a new book he wrote which claims men never have come from monkeys, and he looked at me a long time and said, "There is an exception to every rule."'"

"I hope the college lad didn't try to slug him," said the Head Barber. "That might have led to complications, as the Sheriff said when the horse thief tried to make a getaway. I have seen bigger men than your college friend try that stuff."

"He didn't try it," said the Manicure Lady, "but he said he had a good notion to. I guess that's about all them college guys has, good notions. Some of them may be all right, but I wish to goodness that they wouldn't come in here and try to kid me. I would rather they never had their nails did at all.

"I like the smooth kidding, but I certainly can't stand for the immature brand. He even asked me if I was engaged, just because he got a flash at the diamond ring brother Wilfred gave me the time he sold that song called 'I'm a Bookworm with a Bookworm.' I told said college kid that it was none of his business, and that seemed to sink deep into his tender young soul.

"He blanched perceptible. He even quaked once or twice, and seemed to be quite nonplussed. Oh, I ain't cruel, George, as a general run, but I can be; I certainly can be.

"The old gent up home told me last night, 'Daughter, for a girl with your refinement and bringing up, and lovely, even temper, you can be as rough as a longshoreman when you start in to lay folks out.'

Holding a Public Job

"I don't care. They got a nerve, I must say, them freshies. Just because a girl holds a public position that's no sign that she ain't human."

"You talk like a Senator," said the Head Barber. "I don't think you could call your job holding a public position. But even at that, look what they do to the Senators. Folks in the public eye, kiddo, can't afford to be very particular when they get things handed to them. They have to take the good and bad alike."

"You're a pitying person, ain't you?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "I hope some old grouch comes to your chair this morning and bawls you out good."

Dainty Aprons

THE girl who can stencil or do rapid embroidery should make one or more of the new flowered aprons to be used for fancy work or when at a chafing dish.

The skirt of the apron is a short oval shape, much like a huge egg. The bib is cut in conventional flower form, the edges cut to the outline of the petals.

On the lower part of the oval an extra piece is added for a pocket. This, too, is decorated, with a big conventional flower and foliage design, with the outline cut to shape. To meet the pocket on upper part of skirt are long sprays of foliage with the points turned in.

The design is stenciled in natural colors, or the design is worked in heavy outline and a bold filling stitch or in a bold, long and short stitch.

When the pocket is sewed on and the bib sewed to the skirt the entire apron is outlined with a full frill of inch-wide Val. lace. This is also used around the petal-shaped top of the pocket.

Ties or ribbon to match the predominating tone of the apron complete the dainty effect. Use a nice quality of lawn for the apron, one not too flimsy to take the coloring of embroidery.

Choose a bold flower for your design, as a twentieth century dahlia, a huge wild rose with turnover petals, an iris or a chrysanthemum. A set of such aprons, each in a different flower, would make novel prizes for a card party.

Did you ever see this picture? It's old and familiar. The shimmering crowd drifting by the brave little clink of a begging tambourine, with a frozen shoulder and a bright, hard eye, while the only coin fell from the fingers of a frayed, shy man with a happy equally frayed and adoring little wife on his arm.

DOWN this road the two men walked, while the supporting wall of the garden upon their right hand grew higher and higher above their heads. They came to a steep flight of steps which makes a short cut from the hotel to the road, and at the steps Hanaud stopped.

"Do you see?" he said. "On the opposite side there are no houses; there's only a wall. Beyond the wall there are climbing gardens and the ground falls steeply to the turn of the road below. There's a flight of steps leading down which corresponds with the flight of steps from the garden. Very often there's a serjent-de-ville stationed on the top of the steps.

"But there was not one there yesterday afternoon at three.

"Behind us is the supporting wall of the hotel garden. Well, look about you. We cannot be seen from the hotel. There's not a soul in sight—yes, there's some one coming up the hill, but we have been standing here quite long enough for you to stab me and get back to your coffee on the veranda of the hotel."

Ricardo started back.

"Marthe Gobin!" he cried. "It was here, then!" Hanaud nodded.

"When we returned from the station in your motor car and went up to your rooms we passed Harry Wethermill sitting upon the veranda over the garden, drinking his coffee.

"He had the news then that Marthe Gobin was on her way."

"But you had isolated the house in Geneva. How could he have the news?" exclaimed Ricardo, whose brain was whirling.

"I had isolated the house from him, in the sense that he dared not communicate with his accomplices. That is what you have to remember. He could not even let them know that they must not communicate with him.

"So he received a telegram. It was carefully worded. No doubt he had arranged the wording of any message with the care which was used in all the preparations.

"It ran like this"—and Hanaud took a scrap of paper from his pocket and read out from it a copy of the telegram:

"'Agent arrives Aix 3:07 to negotiate purchase of your patent.' The telegram was handed in at Geneva station at 12:45, five minutes after the train had left which carried Marthe Gobin to Aix. And more, it was handed in by a man strongly resembling Hippolyte Tace—that we know."

"That was madness," said Ricardo.

"But what else could they do over there in Geneva? They did not know that Harry Wethermill was suspected. Harry Wethermill had no idea of it himself. But, even if they had known, they must take the risk.

"Put yourself into their place for a moment. They had seen my advertisement about Celie Harland in the Geneva paper. Marthe Gobin, that busybody who was always watching her neighbors, was no doubt watched herself. They see her leave the house, an unusual proceeding for her with her husband ill, as her own letter tells us. Hippolyte follows her to the station, sees her take her ticket to Aix and mount into the train.

A Desperate Situation

"He must guess at once that she saw Celie Harland enter their house, that she is travelling to Aix with the information of her whereabouts. At all costs she must be prevented from giving that information. At all risks, therefore, the warning telegram must be sent to Harry Wethermill."

Ricardo recognized the force of the argument.

"If only you had heard of the telegram yesterday in time!" he cried.

"Ah, yes!" Hanaud agreed. "But it was only sent off at a quarter to one. It was delivered to Wethermill and a copy was sent to the Prefecture, but the telegram was delivered first."

"When was it delivered to Wethermill?" asked Ricardo.

"At three. We had already left for the station. Wethermill was sitting on the veranda. The telegram was brought to him there. It was brought by a waiter in the hotel who remembers the incident very well. Wethermill has seven minutes and the time it will take for Marthe Gobin to drive from the station to the Majestic. What does he do? He runs up first to your rooms, very likely not yet knowing what he must do. He runs up to verify his telegram."

"Are you sure of that?" cried Ricardo. "How can you be? You were at the station with me. What makes you sure?"

Hanaud produced a brown kid glove from his pocket.

"This."

"That is your glove; you told me so yesterday."

Wethermill's Gloves

"I told you so,' replied Hanaud calmly; "but it is not my glove. It is Wethermill's; there are his initials stamped upon the lining—see? I picked up that glove in your room, after we had returned from the station. It was not there before. He went to your rooms. No doubt he searched for a telegram. Fortunately he did not examine your letters, or Marthe Gobin would never have spoken to us as she did after she was dead."

"Then what did he do?" asked Ricardo eagerly; and, though Hanaud had been with him at the entrance to the station all this while, he asked the question in absolute confidence that the true answer would be given to him.

"He returned to the veranda wondering what he should do. He saw us come back from the station in the motor car and go up to your room. We were alone. Marthe Gobin, then, was following. There was his chance.

"Marthe Gobin must not reach us, must not tell her news to us. He ran down the garden steps to the gate. No one could see him from the hotel. Very likely he hid behind the trees, whence he could watch the road.

"A cab comes up the hill; there's a woman in it—not quite the kind of a woman who stays at your hotel, M. Ricardo. Yet she must be going to your hotel, for the road ends.

"The driver is nodding on his box, refusing to pay any heed to his fare lest again she should bid him hurry. His horse is moving at a walk. Wethermill puts his head in at the window and asks if she has come to see M. Ricardo. Anxious for her four thousand francs, she answers 'Yes.' Perhaps he steps into the cab; perhaps as he walks by the side he strikes, and strikes hard and strikes surely. Long before the cab reaches the hotel he is back again on the veranda."

"Yes," said Ricardo, "it's the daring of which you spoke which made the crime possible—the same daring which made him seek your help. That was unexampled."

"No," replied Hanaud. There's a historic crime in your own country, monsieur. Cries for help were heard in a by-street of a town. When people ran to answer them, a man was found kneeling by a corpse. It was the kneeling man who cried for help, but it was also the kneeling man who did the murder. I remembered that when I first began to suspect Harry Wethermill."

Ricardo turned eagerly.

"And when—when did you first begin to suspect Harry Wethermill?"

Hanaud smiled and shook his head.

"That you shall know in good time. I am the captain of the ship." His voice took a deeper note. "But I prepare you. Listen! Daring and brains, those were the property of Harry Wethermill—yes. But it is not he who is the chief actor in the crime. Of that I am sure. He was no more than one of the instruments."

"One of the instruments? Used, then, by whom?" asked Ricardo.

"By my Normandy peasant woman, M. Ricardo," said Hanaud. "Yes, there's the dominating figure—cruel, masterful, relentless—that strange woman, Helene Vauquier. You are surprised? You will see! It is not the man of intellect and daring; it's my peasant woman who is at the bottom of it all."

"But she's free!" exclaimed Ricardo. "You let her go free!"

"Free!" repeated Ricardo. "She was driven straight from the Villa Rose to the depot. She has been kept au secret ever since."

"She Lied to Me," He Said

Ricardo stared in amazement.

"Already you know of her guilt?"

"Already she had lied to me in her description of Adele Rossignol.' Do you remember what she said—a black haired woman with beady eyes; and I only five minutes before had picked up from the table—this."

He opened his pocketbook, and took from an envelope a long strand of red hair.

"But it was not only because she lied that I had her taken to the depot. A pot of cold cream had disappeared from the room of Mlle. Celie."

"Then Perrichet after all was right," said Ricardo.

"Perrichet after all was quite wrong—not to hold his tongue," replied Hanaud. "For in that pot of cold cream, as I was sure, were hidden those valuable diamond earrings which Mlle. Celie habitually wore."

The two men had reached the square in front of the Establishment des Baines. Ricardo dropped on to a bench and wiped his forehead.

"But I am in a maze," he cried. "My head turns round. I don't know where I am."

Hanaud stood in front of Ricardo, smiling. He was not displeased with his companion's bewilderment; it was all so much of tribute to himself.

"I am the captain of the ship," he said.

His smile irritated Ricardo, who spoke impatiently.

"I should be very glad," he said, "if you would tell me how you discovered all these things. And what it was that the little salon on the first morning had to tell to you? And why Celia Harland ran from the glass doors across the grass to the motor car and again from the carriage into the house on the lake? Why she did not resist yesterday evening? Why she did not cry for help? How much of Helene Vauquier's evidence was true and how much false? For what reason Wethermill concerned himself in this affair? Oh, and a thousand things which I do not understand."

"Ah, the cushions, and the scrap of paper, and the aluminum flask" said Hanaud; and the triumph faded from his face. He sopke now to Ricardo with a genuine friendliness.

Waiting for Celia's Story

"You must not be angry with me if I keep you in the dark for a little while. I, too, Mr. Ricardo, have artistic inclinations. I will not spoil the remarkable story which I think Mlle. Celie will be ready to tell us. Afterward I will willingly explain to you what I read in the evidences of the room, and what so greatly puzzled me then.

"But it is not the puzzle or its solution," he said modestly, "which is most interesting here. Consider the people. Mme. Dauvray, the old, rich, ignorant woman, with her superstitions and her generosity, her desire to converse with Mme. de Montespan and the great ladies of the past, and her love of a young, fresh face about her; Helene Vauquier, the maid with her six years of confidential service, who finds herself suddenly supplanted and made to tend and dress in dainty frocks the girl who has supplanted her; the young girl herself, that poor child, with her love of fine clothes, the Bohemian who, brought up amidst trickeries and practising them as a profession, looking upon them and upon misery and starvation and despair as the commonplaces of life, keeps a simplicity and a delicacy and a freshness which would have withered in a day had she been brought up otherwise; Harry Wethermill, the courted and successful man of genius.

"Just imagine if you can what his feelings must have been, when in Mme. Dauvray's bedroom, with the woman he had uselessly murdered lying rigid beneath the sheet, he saw me raise the block of wood from the inlaid floor and take out one by one those jewel cases for which less than twelve hours before he had been ransacking that very room.

On That Awful Night

"But what he must have felt! And to give no sign! Oh, these people are the interesting problems in this story. Let us hear what happened on that terrible night. The puzzle—that can wait."

In Mr. Ricardo's view Hanaud was proved right. The extraordinary and appalling story which was gradually unrolled of what had happened on that night of Tuesday in the Villa Rose exceeded in its grim interest all the mystery of the puzzle. But it was not told at once.

The trouble at first with Mlle. Celie was a fear of sleep. She dared not sleep—even with a light in the room and a nurse at her bedside. When her eyes were actually closing she would force herself desperately back into the living world.

For when she slept she dreamed through again that dark and dreadful night of Tuesday and the two days which followed it, until at some moment endurance snapped and she woke up screaming. But youth, a good constitution, and a healthy appetite had their way with her in the end.

She told her share of the story—she told what happened. There was apparently one terrible scene when she was confronted with Harry Wethermill in the office of Monsieur Fleuriot, the Juge d'Instruction, and on her knees, with tears streaming down her face, besought him to confess the truth.

For a long while he held out. And then there came a strange and human turn to the affair. Adele Rossignol—or, to give her real name, Adele Tace, the wife of Hippolyte—had conceived a veritable passion for Harry Wethermill. He was of a not uncommon type, cold and callous in himself, yet with the power to provoke passion in women.

And Adele Tace, as the story was told of how Harry Wethermill had paid his court to Celia Harland, was seized with a vindictive jealousy. Hanaud was not surprised. He knew the woman criminal of his country—brutal, passionate, treacherous. The anonymous letters in a woman's handwriting which descend upon the Rue de Jerusalem, and betray the men who have committed thefts, had left him no illusions upon that figure in the history of crime.

Wethermill Confesses

Adele Rossignol ran forward to confess, so that Harry Wethermill might suffer to the last possible point of suffering. Then at last Wethermill gave in and, broken down by the ceaseless interrogations of the magistrate, confessed in his turn, too.

The one, and the only one, who stood firmly throughout and denied the crime was Helene Vauquier. Her thin lips were kept contemptuously closed, whatever the others might admit. With a white, hard face, quietly and respectfully she faced the magistrate week after week. She was the perfect picture of a servant who knew her place. And nothing was wrung from her. But without her help the story became complete. And Ricardo was at pains to write it out.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Japanese Bows for Gowns

THERE is a good deal of talk about the placement of the big Japanese bow on the back of gowns. It is a fashion that has not been exploited to any extent, although it was brought over on the model gowns from Paris in October. The women here did not care for it. They thought it made them look heavy and thick at the back of the waist.

Evidently the French came to this conclusion also, for they have greatly changed it. They started out by placing it too far down and making it too broad. It looked immensely well in a wrap for the afternoon or evening, and it served an artistic purpose when put on informal house gowns made of messaline or any soft silk. But it did not get the right swing on a formal evening gown, and it took away from the trig look at the back that the mediaeval gowns had made emphatic.

When Paris found this out it did not abandon the bow, but it changed its position. It experimented with it at different heights and widths. They made it of satin, of tulle, and of supple velevt. What they have decided on is a small bow—that is, small in comparison to what we had in the Fall—and they place it about two inches higher than they did. The effect is very good.

It is this arrangement of it that its many votaries have taken up. They are doing it gingerly as yet, because they are not quite sure how they like it, but it is a new topic of conversation as well as a new fashion, and it is getting more frequent every day. One only hopes that it will not become so commonized that it will be irrelevantly placed.

The Fidgety Lady Has Her Picture Taken

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

SCENE—A fashionable photographer's gallery.

MRS. BRADFORD—A rather stout woman in an elaborate evening gown.

PHOTOGRAPHER—Suave and diplomatic.

MRS. BRADFORD (impressively and with evident self-satisfaction)—It is always so very hard for me to get a good picture. So much depends upon my expression. I'm really a very difficult subject.

PHOTOGRAPHER (suavely)—We are always glad to have difficult subjects, as we are most successful with them. Now turn your head just a little to the right.

(Mrs. Bradford turns her whole body to the right.)

PHOTOGRAPHER—No, no; just your head. (He steps forward and patiently poses her again, then steps back to the camera.) Now raise your chin just a trifle—not so much—there!

MRS. BRADFORD (anxiously)—Have you fixed my dress so the drop skirt shows? And I think I'd like it drawn around more. I like that graceful, swirling effect that you see in so many actresses' pictures.

(Photographer kneels down and, for the third time, rearranges her skirt. She bends over to watch him and loses her pose. Once more he poses her and then quickly unmasks the lens.)

MRS. BRADFORD—Oh, have you taken it? Why didn't you tell me? I'm sure I blinked my eyes.

PHOTOGRAPHER—That's all right. It won't show. This is instantaneous.

Where Diplomacy Comes In

MRS. BRADFORD—Now I want one taken this way. (Clasping her hands in front of her and looking up pensively. An attitude that might have been appealing in a slender girl, but which was ridiculous in a stout woman of forty.) I've always wanted one taken like this.

PHOTOGRAPHER—Yes, but—ah—don't you think a slightly more side view would be better? Now this way. (Turning her so the square stoutness of her figure would be less apparent.)

MRS. BRADFORD (insistently wheeling around again, and clasping her hands as before)—No. I've always wanted one taken like THIS!

PHOTOGRAPHER—But I'm afraid you won't like that. You see (then inspirationally) the side view shows your figure to a better advantage; it shows all the most graceful lines.

MRS. BRADFORD—Oh, does it? Well, then, perhaps—now, how did you say?

PHOTOGRAPEHR—Just this way. (Gently turning her to the side.) Now your head like this. Now this hand—there—like that! Now still—just a moment! (Steps back to camera.)

MRS. BRADFORD (after he has spent almost ten minutes in carefully posing her and arranging the lights, and is just stepping back to take picture)—Oh, no; I would rather have it this way. (Changes her whole position.) I've always wanted one sitting like this. (Rests elbow on chair arm and leans head on hand, gazing up with what she imagines is a Madonna-like expression.)

PHOTOGRAPHER (with divine patience)—I'm afraid that is much—well, much less youthful than the other pose. And the light does not fall so well on your face. I am sure you will like the other way better. Now, just allow me once more. (And again he poses her, and at length succeeds in getting the picture.)

MRS. BRADFORD—Now, I do want——

PHOTOGRAPHER (quickly)—I feel sure that you are going to have some very good proofs out of these. And now I think that will be all we will need.

MRS. BRADFORD (dissatisfied)—Oh, is that all you are going to take?

PHOTOGRAPHER (with a weary smile)—I have taken ten, and I think you will find they are very good.

MRS. BRADFORD (reluctantly)—Well, if you think you've taken enough. And you will retouch them VERY carefully?

PHOTOGRAPHER—Oh, yes; we are always most careful about that.

MRS. BRADFORD—And I hope you will make them as—well—as attractive as possible. I don't see any reason why pictures should make one look any—any older than they are, do you?

"As Youthful as Possible"

PHOTOGRAPHER (diplomatically)—Oh, no; we always make our subjects look as youthful as possible—without, of course, taking all the character out of the face.

MRS. BRADFORD—And when can I see the proofs?

PHOTOGRAPHER—Next Tuesday, any time in the afternoon.

MRS. BRADFORD—Oh, not before Tuesday?

PHOTOGRAPHER—Well, you shouldn't hurry us—if you want us to give you our very best work.

MRS. BRADFORD—Oh, well then, Tuesday will do. (Goes into dressing room.)

ASSISTANT—A Miss Ellsworth.

PHOTOGRAPHER—Is she old and fat and fussy?

ASSISTANT—No.

PHOTOGRAPHER—Thank Heavens!

Pneumonia to be feared more than death from gun shot.

The frequent changes of temperature in the Fall and Winter months are the source of much discomfort and destruction of human life. Raw, damp, cold air, snow, sleet and rain take turns at producing crops of colds and coughs. These lead to pneumonia. Nearly every case has its beginning in a simple cough and cold that was neglected. Thousands of people die as a result. It is more certain to result in death than a wound from gun shot.

A sudden chill, rising fever, sore throat, hoarseness, running nose, headache, cough, painful breathing are the forerunners of pneumonia.

Avoid the danger. Try the one certain reliable remedy for colds and coughs; namely, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It does not contain any opiates. It is perfectly safe and reliable. It is the best remedy for soothing and subduing the inflamed conditions of the bronchial tubes and lungs. It checks cough and cold quickly and completely. Test it first by sending a postal for a free sample. Address A. C. Meyer & Co., Baltimore, Md. But, to have no delay, get a regular bottle of the remedy, price 25c., from your druggist to-day and take no substitute. This is the best advice we can give you to avoid pneumonia.

Desperate Desmond

YOUR LOVER WILL BE PIERCED BY THIS SLOWLY DESCENDING IRON GATE, HA, HA, HA, HA.
FAREWELL MY ROSAMOND. DESMOND WILL PAY FOR THIS!
THESE SHIELDS WILL SAVE MY LOVER CLAUDE!
SLOWLY THE GATE GOES DOWN!
I'LL DROP THEM QUICKLY AND LET THEM ROLL IN SAVED!
SAVED!
GREAT WELLINGTON! THERE HAS BEEN FOUL PLAY!
THE GUARDS' VOICE. I'M SAVED!
HAVE YOU DESMOND!
THIS OLD ARMOR WILL FOIL CLAUDE ECLAIRE!
HERSHFIELD

Here is Claude Eclaire helplessly squinting up at the sharp spikes of the London Tower gate, where we left him on Saturday. What a dreary Sunday he must have had, and how pleasant it must have been for Desmond's black heart, especially as the guards always take Sunday off, leaving him free to work his cruel will.

But, aha! What have we here? Rosamond to the rescue! You may have, perhaps, entertained the thought that she was one of those poor, helpless young creatures, but you are wrong. She has an idea, which is rare these days. Now let us see what she will do with it. In the meantime, note Desmond's devilish expression.

We never knew it before, but evidently Rosamond must have been one of those expert vaudeville hoop rollers that you see nowadays. Or perhaps she learned that trick when but a mere child. Anyhow, it looks like the goods, and Claude may be saved in spite of Desmond. He shouldn't have waited so long.

Ah! As you see in the picture, the shields have rolled over Claude just in time to prevent the crew-el spikes from puncturing his anatomy. Claude is fortunate in having such a brainy girl for a sweetheart. We once knew a girl like that, who—but never mind, we are married now and our past is sealed.

Well, it's about time that a guard got on the job. The idea of leaving the gate open all day Sunday! It's a wonder somebody didn't come along and steal the old tower. Now to raise the gate and extricate Claude from his dilemma. You may not have known that he was in a dilemma; but he was, honest he was.

Now, with clash of steel, Claude and Desmond will settle their differences. But, no, we are mistaken, for see, the villain has a pistol. That fellow just can't fight fair. But why is Rosamond standing there instead of by her sweetheart? Who knows, perhaps she has another idea. To-morrow's pictures will tell.

Don't

By KENNETT HARRIS

IT'S early yet, but that's no sign
I shouldn't let my wisdom flow.
Forethought is timely, I opine.
Neglect it and your cake is dough.
I am a friend of yours and, so,
Your smartness and your smiles I'll bear,
If you'll observe this pregnant line:
Don't shed your Winter underwear.

Quite soon the weather will be fine;
You'll feel the southern breezes blow;
You'll see the sun begin to shine
And birds will sing and roosters crow.
You'll feel your body in a glow;
That Spring has fairly come, you'll swear.
But just go a little slow.
Don't shed your Winter underwear.

The morning may be quite divine,
But ere the evening it will snow;
The wintry wind will howl and whine,
And then the grippe will lay you low.
You'll squirm in sneezing, snuffling woe
Because you thought the day was fair.
This isn't any guess. I know.
Don't shed your Winter underwear.

L'ENVOI.

It's free advice that I bestow.
Go, beard the lion in his lair,
Go twist the tiger's tail, but oh!
Don't shed your Winter underwear.

The Revival of the Velvet Bag

THE velvet bag is enjoying a well merited revival; indeed, it is rapidly pushing the gold and silver mesh one from first place in popular favor.

Though there has not been a revival of the convenient side bags, the hand bags are smart and light. The favorite shape is oblong and rather smaller than the ordinary leather bag.

The sombreness of the black velvet—most of them are this color, though occasionally one matches a costume—is relieved by the marking. Gold or silver initials in small block letters are used in middle of front. More elaborate is the gold monogram, and there are even crests and monograms done in small diamonds of the Parisian order.

One of the objections to the velvet bag is that it is a dust catcher. It needs frequent rubbing off. To keep it in good condition a small piece of crepe is carried in the inside pocket. The roughness of this material makes it an admirable duster for velvet.

Both oval and square frames are correct. The latter are more expensive, because more difficult to make and polish.

Wooden frames are flat and plain, except in a few cases, when a little carving is seen as a motif placed in the centre of the top of a square frame. The plain frames are, however, considered better taste.

Gold frames are exceedingly dainty in design, small delicate molding being preferred to bold patterns. Indeed, some of the frames give the impression of being worked with the needle and gold thread used generously, rather than molding.

Blanket Care

ONE of the first places to show wear in a blanket is along the edge, which will begin to split into a coarse fringe. Keeping blankets well bound with inch wide ribbon will prevent this. Unless some accident happens to a blanket patching is not resorted to until it is very old, then a piece from another blanket may be laid on large enough to cover the worn place and held in place by darning rather than seaming. All thin places can be fortified by darning with ravelings from an old blanket. When the blanket is worn past repair, just double it and quilt it together here and there and lay it across the mattress under the sheet, and it will continue to be of service.

The House With No Address

A Story of Love and Tragedy, by E. Nesbit. Copyright by Doubleday, Page and Company

Synopsis of First Instalment

Edward Templar, the young scion of a rich old English family, is about to go to the Boer war, but before he leaves England he decides to visit his uncle and aunt at their country house, the Reka Dom, on theedge of the New Forest, to say farewell.

Before entering the house he plans to spend an hour of solitude in the forest, where he had passed pleasant moments in boyhood. As he lies on the sward he hears the notes of a pipe and crawls along through the underbrush to ascertain what strange musician is about in the depths of the forest. The music is unusually good.

Presently, from his place of concealment, he sees an open glade, golden in the sunlight—a veritable sylvan theatre. At one side, on a fallen sapling, sits a boy, barefooted, barechested blowing at a gleaming pipe.

To the music of the strange Pan danced a nymph. It was the dance of the wildwood nymph and the music was the music of the Valse des Fleurs. The flute of Pan was a penny whistle.

The dancer's straight limp, black hair hung in hanks on each side of a narrow, brown face that broadened suddenly at the brow where large dark eyes were.

She had a wreath of the delicate white-flowered weed, called Our Lady's Bedstraw—a twisted rope of it—thick as your two wrists. Her lips were long and pale, her cheeks smooth and brown.

Her bare, brown arms waved and wove the air into circles; her ankles, brown, too, and the bare feet touched the mossy turf in swift, soft caress.

The music quickened, the brown feet moved faster and faster—the muscles of arms and legs stiffened squarely. The eyes that had flashed to the first quickening of the music grew dull as the heavy lids drooped over them. The mouth stretched to a pale red line, the white teeth catching the lower lip.

Suddenly she seemed to tire of her dancing. She moved in graceful step toward a branch where hung a blue silk gown. Before this she postured, with outstretched arms, then receded from it, rushed toward it and, catching it in her arms, bore it away to an inner recess behind the oak.

The music ceased.

"I won't look," said Pan, and covered his face with his hands.

CHAPTER I.—(Continued)

"I WISH you wouldn't do that," said Pan, wiping his whistle on his coat sleeve, "it's outlandish, that is; I don't like it."

"Why?" she said, from among the blue folds.

"You know why. It's like as if you was dancing to a dead man—one that's hanged by the neck till he's dead, like it says in the papers."

"Perhaps I am," she said; "perhaps it really is a dead man, Denny. Perhaps I've just done some magic to make you think it's only my blue gown. You know I'm a witch, don't you, Den?"

"Ah," said Pan gloomily. "I know that well enough. But I won't 'ave you talk about it—See? If you do I shan't whistle for you no more—I ain't goin' to whistle for a witch, not even if it's you, Miss Sandy."

Mr. Templar was now fully awake to his own indiscretion. Yet he could not move, without deepening that indiscretion to the blackness of the chimney back.

Templar an Eavesdropper

To watch is one thing; to listen is another. A really high-souled young man would have said "Ahem," and made his presence known, so as to be quite sure of not being an eavesdropper. But Edmund was not sufficiently high-souled to intrude the knowledge of his presence on a girl in her petticoat and shift, even though that girl were only a slip of a thing who could not, by any chance, be a day older than her first teen.

So he lay still, and knew that still he must lie till the scene was over, and the actors gone, and the woodland drop scene fallen once more on their sylvan stage.

"Ah," said the girl, swaying the blue folds to and fro, her face still hidden in them, "you didn't believe in witches when you came from London, did you?"

"No."

"But I've made you believe in them, haven't I?"

"Yes."

"And in all the good things, too. God and His angels and the blessed saints?"

"Yes."

"And you're a good Christian?"

"Yes."

"And you're very frightened of me?"

"Yes."

"And you love me very much?"

"Yes."

"And you'll always do what I tell you?"

"Yes."

"Then wait till I get my frock on, and then you shall say your creed and I'll give you the sixpence and you can go."

She picked up the dress and turned towards the thicket furthest away from Templar.

"Where you going?"

"To put on my dress. I don't mind dressing with you here—you're just the same as my faithful dog—aren't you, Denny? But I'm not going to dress with strange men about and there's a man under the bushes looking at us."

"Where? I don't see him!"

"Stay still. I don't see him. But I know he's here. And I forbid you to look for him. Perhaps he's invisible to you; anyway, I won't have you look for him. I shall tie my sash round your eyes."

"No," said Pan, jerking his head back as she came towards him with the long blue linen streamer. "Honor bright."

And he shut his eyes.

She parted the green screen and disappeared behind it.

"You Man, Don't Move"

"You man," came the voice from behind moving green leaves, "don't you dare move till I say you may."

Ther was a pause. Pan kept his eys tightly shut. Templar, under his bush, changed to an easier attitude.

When in blue linen with bound hair she came back in the filtered sunlight, he saw that she had at least two years more than he had assigned to her. Her face was now grave, her eyes narrowed thoughtfully.

"Now," she said, "Denny, you are to keep your eyes shut. Perhaps there isn't any man here at all. Perhaps I'm only trying your obedience. But if you look I'll never let you come here and play for me any more."

"Now, you man," she said, "come out. But you're not to speak. If you speak I shall know exactly what to think of you, and I shall tell my grandfather that you are a poacher."

Nothing, Templar felt, would induce him to enter that grassy arena on his stomach. He drew back through the bushes, resumed the upright and stepped out.

When he was quite out he bowed very formally. But her bow was yet more formal.

"I don't wish you to speak,' she said, "but I wish you to know that you ought to be torn by dogs like Actaeon." Denny growled. "Be quiet Den. You man, that isn't common dancing."

Templar shook his head earnestly and she frowned.

"It all means things. It's the only way I have of telling you what I mean. If you go and tell, it'll be stopped." He shook his head to express trustworthiness.

"Of course," she went on, thoughtfully, "I could bewitch you."

He did not nod there, though he wanted to.

"I could make your cows go dry, and your pigs have swine fever, and your horses go lame and your chickens have the pip."

He spread his deprecating hands.

Pledged to Silence

"But I won't. And you won't tell. You couldn't—you're a gentleman. No gentleman would be a sneak. And if you did, there's Denny. The only thing he cares for is his whistle and me—and me. Isn't it, Denny?"

"You know it is all right," said Denny, muffled.

Templar shook his head again. He wished the child would have let him speak. He could have been so adequate, light yet deferent, condescending a little to her youth—respectful to her genius. As it was, he shook his head, then nodded: it was the best he could do.

"Thank you. That's decent of you. And I don't like being indebted to people. I must do something for you. Shall I tell your fortune? I always carry the cards. A gypsy taught me—one of the Lees," she added proudly, and her dark eyes met his with limpid assurance.

He was glad of anything that delayed the moment of parting from her. She motioned him to sit down on the turf.

"Now shuffle, and cut into three heaps. You must wish all the time you have the cards in your hands. Wish for something you really want, not just that it may be fine to-morrow, or that you may be asked to a dance or something."

He shuffled the cards slowly, with his eyes on the lanky figure almost prim in its neat blue. And through the disguise of the schoolgirl he saw the nymph, and he wished, and his wish was like this:

"I wish that I may meet you when you're a woman and that I may kiss you then"—I wish I could say that he wished that she might love and marry him, but he did not. He wished just what I have told you. And with that he cut the cards and laid them in three heaps on the moss between the tree roots.

Telling the Fortune

She picked them up, held them in her hands, frowning a little.

"Oh, well," she said, "I'll lay them out for you." And she did, in four rows of eight, and two alone below. Out of doors in the sunshine cards are very red and white and black—like old women of the town with last night's rouge on their cheeks and last week's dye in their hair. Templar moved impatiently. The cards were spoiling the scene.

The child was sitting sideways, leaning on one hand, her head bent over the cards. After a silent minute she flung her chin up, looked straight skyward and then quickly began to gather up the cards, taking them one by one from rows alternate, and from opposite ends of the rows.

Her lips moved, but she did not speak. When all the cards were in her hands she looked at him—almost furtively—then suddenly shut the cards together tightly and slipped them into her pocket.

"I won't tell your fortune," she said definitely; "it's all nonsense, really. Good-bye."

He shook his head and looked imploring.

"Good-bye," she said again. "Go."

Slowly he got out card case and pencil; wrote, and laid the card on her knee, for her hand would not come out to meet it.

"If you do not tell my fortune," he said, "I shall speak."

"Coward," she said, and stopped short on the word, reaching her hand for the pencil.

"It is because of Denny; it's all nonsense, but it would frighten him," was what Templar read in an angular, fierce, half-formed handwriting.

The Head Waitress

By Hank

"SAY," said the Head Waitress to the Steady Customer, as she slid a plate of ham and beans in front of him in the Cafe des Enfants, "have you got a phonograph at home?"

"Nope," said the Steady Customer. "I've got three kids and they make enough noise for me, thank you."

"Oh, but a phonograph is great fun," said the Head Waitress. "You can listen to all the popular airs, hear funny stories, and have opera selections in your own home. You ought to hear Caruso singing in the front parlor. Gee, that guy certainly has some warble!"

"As for listening to all the popular airs," said the Steady Customer, "I don't know any that's popular. If you mean the latest songs, I hear them all around me; in fact, most of them I hear all at once. In my neighborhood 8 o'clock in the evening is one joyous realm of song. Four pianos, two phonographs and fifty crying kids, all endeavoring to outdo each other. I'd hate to introduce Caruso into such company."

George May Regret That

"Well, I have a lot of fun out of mine," said the Head Waitress. "Last night me and some folks, what was visiting us, including George, my steady, all sang into the phonograph, and say, you should have heard it come out. It was great. I hardly knew myself. George says that if I keep on hollering out orders in this joint for two years more I'll have a voice strong enough to be cultivated."

"George will regret those words after you and him is married," said the Steady Customer. "He'll probably wish your voice had been manicured instead of cultivated."

"Oh, you're a knocker," replied the Head Waitress, "but wait till I tell you something funny that happened. After we made that record I put on another blank one. Everybody but me and George had gone out of the room so we took the first chanst we had had that evening to have a kiss. Well, I didn't notice that binmed old machine was running, so after we had sung into the record again, we put on the instrument to bring out the music and this is how it sounded:

"'Has anybody here seen Kelly?—Oh, George, that's three you've had already. K-E-double-L-Y. Has anybody here seen—Now, George, quit it, there's somebody coming, I know there is.' What do you think of that?"

"What did you do?" asked the Steady Customer.

She Just Got Flustered

"Oh, I was so flustered I just run out of the room," she said, "while George he got red, too, but laughed sorter weaklike and put on a Caruso record to us to drown out them that was laughing at him. Caruso is great. Every time anybody comes, who 's a tiresome talker, I put Caruso on the machine and you can't hear nothing else."

"That gives me an idea," said the Steady Customer, brightening up. "By heck, I think I'll get one of those things myself."

"Why, what are you going to do with it?" asked the Head Waitress, looking surprised.

"Plant it in the dining room, and when my mother-in-law comes turn on Caruso," said the Steady Customer. "If Caruso can drown her out he's a good one."

"I guess he can," said the Head Waitress, "and there's another thing about a phonograph, which I'll tell you, although it's against members of my sex. The phonograph is the only thing in the world that can beat a woman to it on getting the last word."

"True," said the Steady Customer. "It's a wonderful invention and should be in every maried man's home. I'm going to get one."

The New Bags

THE newest handbags are quite small, doubtless in contrast to the mammoth ones we have been carrying. The favorite shape is oblong, about seven inches wide and five deep.

The special favorites for Spring are in colored leather in shades of mauve, apricot, blue, violet and red. They usually carry on the outer flap three small initials in gold or in a darker shade than the leather.

Most of these bags, though small, have on one side compartments for mirror and vanity case and on the other a place for handkerchief and card case. Others have a special change purse attached by a light chain, so it can be easily pulled out in a crowd, instead of fishing in a crowded bag.

Advice to Lovelorn

TIME WILL TELL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of twenty and have known a young man ten years my senior for two years. He calls to see me occasionally, as he studies in the evening. He has given me expensive presents and has taken me to his home to meet his people.

I am deeply in love with him and think, from his actions, he cares for me; but he has never said anything to me.

I would appreciate your opinion on the matter as I am greatly perplexed.

A. A. O.

HE seems to be very fond of you, but you must be patient and not try to force a declaration. Perhaps he is not in a position to become engaged. If he really cares for you he will tell you so sooner or later. Have no fear of that.

BETTER BE HONEST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl, still in my teens, but know of a young man, two years my senior, who is very fond of me, and has told me that he loves me.

Now, I do not care in the least for him, but I do not like to tell him so, because he may feel hurt.

I may have encouraged him a trifle, which I know was not right of me to do, so I would like to have you tell me just what you think I should do.

Tell him outright that I do not care for him? Or should I leave things go on as at present.

P. G.

IF you feel that he is deeply interested in you, the best and kindest thing to do is to tell him honestly that you only care for him as a friend. If he does not care seriously, you might let things go on as they are.

LEAVE THINGS AS THEY ARE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl seventeen years of age, and considered quite good looking. About six months ago I was invited to an engagement party, and while there met a young man who seemed to have fallen in love with me.

I do not love him, but just like him as a friend. He called on me several times and we went out together, but in a month I have not seen or heard from him. I have learned from a friend of his that he was well and enjoying himself. I am sure that I have not offended him in any way, and therefore am anxious to learn the cause for his staying away.

Do you think that it would be proper for me to write to him and learn the cause? I am in doubt whether I should or not, because that may lead him to think that I am running after him.

WAITING.

I THINK you had better leave things as they are. He probably understands that you like him only as a friend, and on that basis you will probably see him again. Of course, it is possible that he has fallen in love with some girl and naturally you would not see him very often if that were so.

AUTO SHOW IS DISMANTLED

By J. C. KERRISON.

The automobile show of 1911 is a thing of the past. Its memory will linger for another year. Then every effort will be made to surpass the brilliant record that was created last week; a record unexcelled in any other city in the country, and one which the rest of the United States wonder at.

The dismantling of the show was inaugurated almost before the last of the visitors had left either Mechanics Building or Horticultural Hall on Saturday night. No sooner was the closing incidents over than many of the dealers started to pull their cars out of the building, not so much that they wanted them as in order to oblige their customers who had purchased the show cars and desired immediate delivery. The contingent that comprised the Horticultural Hall exhibitors made a clean sweep through that building, even before the birth of the Sabbath. President John I. Taylor and Manager Emmons wading the coalition.

Rush to Deliver Cars.

They made short order of hauling out the three Herreshoff models and took them no further than the street, for the new owners of the cars were awaiting delivery. The Decatur truck was next and, in a comparatively short time the Taylor outfits bade good-bye to the hall. Running a close second with them was the Oakland outfit, this company delivering the majority of their cars at the hall.

Of course the greatest activity was at Mechanics Building. Here everything was seemingly confusion, and yet the most methodical methods were followed, resulting in the greater portion of the numerous display being out of the building before the exhibitors retired for their period of hard earned rest. Yesterday, of course, was a day of rest in all fairness. Some few were around the hall, but they were few and far between, the great majority preferring to wait until this morning before removing everything from the scene of recent activity.

If one visited the hall this morning he would not recognize it as the attractive, orderly building in which Boston's latest automobile show had been held, and where thousands upon thousands of dollars' worth of business had been transacted. The two great halls were littered and confused. Through everyone of the exits cars were being hauled or pushed and the attendants were not answering countless questions fired at their several heads. Instead they were swapping experiences of the previous week, and to tell the truth many of them were unusually interesting.

Hustle Everywhere.

Manager Chester I. Campbell had his force of men at work tearing down the decorations, and painting, getting the hall into such shape as would permit them to turn it over to the landlord in apple pie order and within the specified period.

One could readily see which of the cars had been the most popular attractions during the week by looking at the matting that covered the floors. Some of this was worn away in places, indicating, so it was said, the great popularity of the cars which last week had been shown in those spaces. Everywhere there was the greatest of bustle and bustle, and the streets around the building presented a most animated appearance.

LONE WOMEN TO TOUR SAHARA

Mrs. Julian Kebler, a rich Colorado ranch owner, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Catherine Kebler of Brookline, is to motor through the Sahara desert. She will be accompanied by another woman and a chauffeur. Neither the probability of encountering plundering Bedouin tribes in the Sahara or the climatic hardships to be expected, have any deterring effect upon Mrs. Kebler. A part of her outfit for the journey will consist of implements with which cowboys are provided, including pistols, for Mrs. Kebler is as expert in handling the pistol as she is in casting the lariat.

"If we find things too tame in Algiers and the desert," she said, "we will make for Sicily. But the bandits are to have every chance. I suppose I ought to leave ransom money in a bank before setting out on the trip."

STREET CAR CAT IS PUT ON PAYROLL

O'Connor of the supply department of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, whose quarters are at One Hundred and Fifty-Ninth street and Eighth avenue, has decided to put the house cat, Thomas, on the payroll beginning with April 1 (a coincidence only). The cat has been with the company for more than ten years and has been faithful and diligent in respect of rats. His remuneration will be spent by Mr. O'Connor for his food. Thomas will appear on the company's books as "Thomas Katz."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS WAVER AT OPENING

NEW YORK, March 13.—The possibility of United States Supreme Court decisions in the federal anti-trust cases caused a tone of irregularity in the stock market at the opening today. There was a feeling of hesitancy and a disposition to await developments.

National Railways of Mexico, 2d pfd. was weak, opening ⅛ off from Saturday's close. Southern Pacific was up ⅛, Missouri Pacific advanced ⅛ in the initial trading and Reading was up ¼. Union Pacific, however, was off ⅛. The coppers were irregular. Amalgamated opened with a decline of ¼ and American Smelting and Refining with a loss of ⅜. United States Steel was up ⅛.

The curb market opened barely steady.

Americans had a downward tendency on the London Exchange. Weakness also characterized the Mexican railway shares in the London market, this evidently being a direct result of military mobilization by the United States on the Mexican border.

GIRL IS ACCUSED OF FATAL SHOOTING

RUTLAND, Vt., March 13.—State Attorney of B. L. Stafford has issued a warrant for Miss Camela Covina of South Poultney, Vt., charging her with the murder of Luigi Vermillo, aged forty-five, who died Saturday night in a hospital at Albany, N. Y., as a result, the State alleges, of a bullet wound inflicted by a revolver in the hands of the girl, who is seventeen years old. The shooting occurred in the girl's house at South Poultney on February 16, Miss Covina and Vermillo being alone at the time.

The Directors of this Corporation have declared a quarterly dividend of 1½% (37½c per share) on the Preferred capital stock, and a dividend of 2% (50c per share) on the Common capital stock, both payable April 5th, 1911, to stockholders of record at the close of business March 15th, 1911.

DIVIDEND CUT IS APPROVED

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The general approval by the public and by stockholders of the New York Central's reduction of dividend makes it evident that directors of other railroads will find popular support in any movement for readjusting payments to shareholders.

There are several railroads which should reduce dividends, either because their payments are not justified by earnings or because they attract undesirable attention because of their size. These reductions should be made now when they cannot be converted into bear arguments on the stock market.

Dividend reductions would put the railroads in control of the situation, for then they could readjust wages and demand concessions from the steel company. It begins to look now as though the big steel companies would meet the railroads half way on such a movement.

It would be perfectly fair because the cost of food has been materially reduced, and the great supply of grain left in farmers' hands, together with the enormous acreage now being planted in new crops, insures a still further reduction. The psychological time has arrived for a general reduction of all prices, which would be equivalent of giving the railroads an increase of freight rates. It would be a wonderful tonic to all kinds of business.

Cut Would Help Bonds.

A reduction of dividends and a re-adjustment of wages and the price of steel would help the sale of railroad bonds to a surprising extent. The old fallacy that a railroad must squander its surplus in dividends in order to market bonds has been exploded. Modern investors prefer bonds of a railroad which has reasonable dividends and a big surplus.

One reason the public has been slow to come into the stock market the last few years, is that the people are as well educated on financial matters as are those who have been trying to dispose of securities with the use of arguments that once appealed to an uneducated community.

This situation is strikingly illustrated in the case of corporations which make reports only once a year. No broker who has any respect for his own business success will advise his clients to invest in the stock of any corporation which does not make quarterly reports. Insiders of the United States Rubber Company, the American Beet Sugar Company, Central Leather, and various other secretive corporations have discovered this to their sorrow in recent manipulative movements in the stock market. The alleged booms in their stocks have been jeered at by all the investing world. They will never win popular favor until they make quarterly reports, despite the fact that the stocks of some of the corporations are really very good investments.

Cheap Money This Summer.

Cheap money is certain to play an important part in the market this Summer. The gold output of the world is the greatest on record, and practically none of it is being absorbed any longer by the national treasuries of the world. This is the equivalent of increasing the output for business.

All the financial centres of the world are feeling the quickening influence of the rising tide of gold. The Bank of England has reduced its discount rate to 3 per cent. and money cannot be loaned in aWll tSreet on call above 2½ per cent. That a scientific plan for reforming the banking system of the United States has been devised has already had an influence in easing money.

The crazy money panics, which have been a disgrace to the United States for generations, will never been seen again. Call money cannot get above 6 per cent. in the United States, and even remote districts will very shortly enjoy cheap money for business purposes.

The balance of trade in favor of America will grow so long as tariff reform is in progress, and that means for two or three years. Both Democrats and Republicans are working for the business public with an eye on the presidency, and the tariff has really been taken out of politics.

Democrats and Republicans are in complete harmony in regard to the method of reforming it.

The business result is that foreign articles on which the tariff rates may be changed will be imported in the smallest quantities possible, for American merchants do not want to be found loaded up with these goods when a reduction is made in the customs. They are, therefore, making demand on American manufacturers for an unusually large percentage of such articles, and they are discovering that American articles are just as good as foreign made.

BEAN FALLS IN FAINT ON COFFIN

MAIDSTONE, March, 13.—Gazing into the faces of his mother, Mrs. George Bean, and his sister, Nina, for whose deaths by shooting he is held, young Arthur Bean fell in a faint on one of the coffins during the funeral service at the Methodist Church at Stratford Hollow, just over the Hampshire line.

The fact that young Bean, suspected by the Vermont authorities of double murder, and kept virtually a prisoner ever since the discovery of the crime, was allowed to cross into another State, established a precedent, it is believed.

It was pointed out here that, if counsel had been retained for the boy and he had been informed of his rights, he could have walked free from the little church where the services were held, and not until the aid of the New Hampshire State Government had been invoked could he have been brought back across the State border.

The youth, picked up limp and nerveless from the caskets of the slain, by his guards, was led willingly enough back to the farmhouse where the double tragedy occurred.

TO SHOW CRUELTY OF VIVISECTION

Exhibits designed to illustrate the horrors and cruelties of vivisection, which will be open to the public, will be a feature of the four days' session which opens to-day in Tremont Temple, under the auspices of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society.

The gathering will be one of the most important ever held by anti-vivisectionists in this part of the country. The public display will be placed in Gilbert Hall, Tremont Temple, and a committee of distinguished women, some of whom will come from New York and Philadelphia, will be in atendance to explain the charges against vivisection. Among the visitors will be Mrs. William J. Guernsey of Philadelphia. The exhibit will be open to the public on Tuesday.

Many of the most distinguished opponents of vivisection will address the sessions, which will be held in Lorimer Hall. To-day Dr. Herbert Snow, one of the greatest authorities on the subject, will address one of the sessions.

MAN MYSTERIOUSLY SHOT AT SALEM

The Salem police are infestigating the shooting of Horace Raby of No. 286 Jefferson avenue, Salem, who is at the Salem Hospital with a bullet wound in his back. He will recover. Raby was with George Voyer of No. 177 Ocean avenue, Salem. Suddenly there was the report of a pistol and Raby pitched forward on his face. A second later, another report rang out. No one could be seen in any direction.

Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Co
First Mortgage 4% Gold Bonds
Due January 1, 1949

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED BY INDORSMENT BY THE CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY

Roswell Miller, Esq., Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, writes in part as follows:

"The bonds of the issue will be secured by an absolute direct First Mortgage on the entire railroad line and appurtenances thereto, now owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound Railway Company (including its franchises, terminals, equipment and operating contracts).

"The bonds will be unconditionally guaranteed as to the payment of both principal and interest thereof by endorsement by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company.

"The Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound Railway is the continuation of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway from Mobridge, South Dakota, to the Pacific Coast, with extensive terminals at Seattle and Tacoma.

"Although the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound Railway was opened for traffic only on August 1, 1909, it is already earning a large surplus over the interest on its First Mortgage Bonds. For the six months ended December 31, 1910, the surplus income of that company, after the payment of all charges, including interest on the $123,000,000 First Mortgage Bonds, amounted to $1,635,952.

"The total authorized amount of the First Mortgage will be $200,000,000; $123,000,000 bonds will be presently issued, of which this $25,000,000 bonds form a part, the balance, $98,000,000 bonds, remaining in the treasury of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company. The $77,000,000 bonds to be issued hereafter are to be reserved for the construction or acquisition of new lines, additional tracks, terminals or interests in terminal companies, equipment, betterments, improvements, etc., under the restrictions of the mortgage.

"All additional lines of railroad acquired with the proceeds of bonds of this issue will become subject to the mortgage as a first lien thereon, or in case the extinguishment of any then existing liens thereon is not practicable, an equal principal amount of bonds of this issue will be reserved by the Trustee until such extinguishment.

"The bonds will mature January 1, 1949, and will bear interest at the rate of four (4) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually on January 1 and July 1 of every year. Bonds will be issued either as Coupon Bonds or Registered Bonds, and will be interchangeable.

"No further bonds of this issue will be sold (except to the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company) for at least the balance of the present calendar year.

"Application will be made to list the Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange."

A LARGE PART OF THE ABOVE BONDS HAVING BEEN SOLD, THE UNDERSIGNED OFFER THE REMAINING BONDS, SUBJECT TO PREVIOUS SALE, AT 95½% AND ACCRUED INTEREST TO DELIVERY, the right being reserved to reject any application in whole or in part.

Payment for bonds purchased must be made on March 28, 1911, at the offices of either of the undersigned. The right is reserved to require a deposit of $50 per bond. Pending the engraving of the definitive bonds (which are to be issued in accordance with a supplemental or a new mortgage to be approved by our counsel), receipts of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company (or temporary bonds), exchangeable for the engraved bonds when ready, will be delivered.

JEWS OBSERVE PURIM HOLIDAY

The Jewish holiday, Purim, or the Feast of Esther, will be celebrated to-night by all the orthodox Jews the world over. Besides the reading of Megilath Esther, or the Story of Esther, which will be done in every synagogue from the parchment scrolls, there will be general rejoicing in all the orthodox homes, where a special feast will be prepared for the members of the family. In many Jewish households there will be special gatherings. The ancient custom of Shalach Munas, or the sending of gifts to one another, will also be observed.

On this day the various charitable institutions and prison inmates are also remembered with good things. Clubs and organizations have arranged for Purim celebrations along different lines.

At Temple Ohabei Shalom, Union Park street, the Advancement Society will hold a dance. The confirmation class of Temple Israel will be given a Purim play under the auspices of the women's society of the Temple. Congregation Adath Jashurun, on Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, will see the children of its Hebrew school present a faithful description of Queen Esther and King Ahasuerus, together with the others who figure in the Story of Esther. The feast will end to-morrow night.

LABOR WILL ERECT MELLEN MONUMENT

The trade unionists of Massachusetts, acting through the State Branch of the A. F. of L., have decided to erect a monument over the grave of Representative James H. Mellen of Worcester as a mark of appreciation for his work on behalf of wage-workers while a member of the Legislature. D. D. Driscoll, secretary of the State Branch, has issued a circular letter appealing for funds, which he is sending to every trade union in the State.

Some Things the Rev. Dr. Aked Might Have Done with Living Pictures in His Pulpit

If He Were to Study the Life of Beecher, He Would Learn That Clergymen Can Produce Results if They Really Want to.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

There is food for thought for Boston in the resignation of the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked, who came over from England to preach to the millionaires who attend the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church in New York.

Dr. Aked has left his fine Fifth Avenue church and his fine Fifth Avenue salary, and another English clergyman is coming over to see what he can do to save expensive American souls.

The Rev. Dr. Aked weeps a little at parting, says that his disappointment is bitter, that he could not possibly do in that fine church the work that he thought he could do.

It looked SO different to him, from his quiet English pulpit.

We gather that Dr. Aked, in the rich Fifth Avenue church, felt like some gentle pigeon suddenly moved from the barnyard quiet to the roaring and howling of a first-class zoological garden.

Reproaches are mingled with the dust that Dr. Aked shakes from his feet as he goes. He says that nothing could be done in that Fifth Avenue pulpit.

We wonder if the reverend gentleman is not mistaken, and if it really was impossible to wake up those souls of bankers, real estate owners, coupon cutters and great corporation managers that sat each Sunday listening to his gentle English accent.

Beecher wanted to make his people feel that slavery was wrong. He wanted them TO FEEL IT, not merely to doze while he talked platitudes about it.

He wasn't content to sandpaper his voice and modulate his tones while he droned and pitifully exhorted.

Beecher got a colored girl, stood with her on a platform in his church, gathered all his parishioners, and sold that slave girl at auction.

As he stood beside the girl, living proof of the dreadful conditions of slavery, and auctioned her off, he talked about the horrible fate of a young girl sold like an animal and put into the hands of slave drivers.

It is quite possible that Beecher, as he talked, had something of a twang; he may have talked a little through his nose. He certainly didn't have one of those fine English accents that our rich churches import to make their Sabbath soothing.

There was nothing of the smooth, highly-polished, long-vowelled Britisher about Beecher, as he shook his heavy head and thick hair, perspiring, pounding the desk, meaning every word he said.

But you can be sure that nobody was asleep or sleepy when that slave girl was put up at auction. You may be sure that there wouldn't be any sleepy heads in that Fifth Avenue church if its managers could pull Beecher out of the grave and get him to talk as he used to talk.

Do you ask what the smooth-voiced Dr. Aked might have done? He might have said to his collection of millionaire souls:

"Dearly beloved, I have here in the pulpit beside me something that is too small to be seen above the top of the pulpit. It is something that I caught alive myself, something that ought to interest you. I'll stand it up here on the edge of the pulpit and show it to you."

Suppose he had then lifted up some ragged, white-faced, half-starved child, taken out of a factory, a mine or a cotton mill.

Suppose he had said to the rich men:

"While your children are in bed, this child is at work. While your children grow strong, this child grows weak and white. This child, little more than a baby, weighs one-third less than it should weigh. The other third, that should be flesh and blood, has been paid out in money dividends to bondholders and stockholders like you.

"You, or men like you, are working and killing tens of thousands of such children.

"It isn't enough for an answer for you to say that YOU don't own any mills that work children, that YOU wouldn't own the bonds of such mills if you knew that children were killed in the mills for profit. As long as you fail to do what you can to stop this, as long as you neglect to use your power over congressmen and legislators to defend children such as this, I tell you that either you are in danger of hell fire or the Bible is a joke.

"Instead of listening to a long sermon to-day, I want you to look at this child, and think about this child for ten minutes, and I want you to give another ten minutes of thought to the words of Him in whose name you are gathered here.

"'Who, so shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that they were drowned in the depth of the sea.'

"'Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you, that in Heaven their angels do always behold the face of my father which is in Heaven.'

"I shall send you to your homes ten minutes from now advising those of you who really believe in the Bible to make it your business to free the poor white slave children as your ancestors freed the black slaves."

On the next Sunday the reverend gentleman might have had for his exhibit an over-worked woman, the mother of a child such as he had described. AND he might have told his parishioners of tens of thousands of such women who work in sweatshops and factories for starvation wages, telling how some of the factories put a premium on "regular attendance," paying more per day for those that never miss an hour, so that they shall force themselves to work even when ill, telling how many of them work and exhaust their vitality up to the last moment before a child is born and begin work again long before they are really strong enough to stand.

If the smooth-voiced English preacher had taken it into his head to introduce some such living pictures into his sermons, we are quite sure that he need not have despaired of making an impression upon the millionaire souls.

But it is quite likely that he would have diminished the American demand for English clergymen with their gentle voices and their gentle recipes for turning American millionaires into white-robed angels.

What Woman Would Do With the Ballot

By DOROTHY DIX

IN a recent speech, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, director of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, gave the women of the country credit for the passage of the national pure food and drug law. He said:

"I have never yet seen a woman's club which has taken the wrong side when there was a great issue at stake, and I have known many men's clubs that have done that very thing. The Federation of Women's Clubs and all the other big organizations of women stood ready to assist in every way when the time came to make the test of whether a drastic law should be passed giving to the people wholesome food or poisonous adulterations."

A great many people ask, what would women do with the ballot if they had it? Has not Dr. Wiley answered that question. They would be on the side of righteousness.

They would make mistakes, of course, being human. They would make no startling innovation in government that would bring about a civic millennium, for they do not claim any superior statesmanship or political acumen; but the woman vote, irrespective of party, could always be counted on to be a vote for decency, for morality, for the better side.

How It Has Worked Out

Nor is this any mere theory. It is the way suffrage for women has worked out wherever it has been tried. After he had been knifed by his party machine, for political reasons, it was the vote of the women of Denver that kept Judge Ben Lindsey in office and enabled him to continue the great work of child saving that he had begun.

The women of Seattle have used their first vote to depose a Mayor who was publicly accused of trafficking in vice, but who was not put out of his office until the women of the city had a voice in its government; and in Australia and New Zealand, when the experiment of woman suffrage has been gloriously successful, it is said that the women's vote is light except when some moral issue is to the fore. Then women rally to the polls in large numbers and invariably vote for the right.

By our enemies ye shall also know us and it is an indisputable fact that the bitterest opponents of woman suffrage everywhere, are machine politicians. The corruptionist, the ward heeler, the pander to vice, the saloonkeeper, are to a man against giving women the right to vote and just how much they fear the woman vote needs no other proof than the enormous contribution that the liquor interest has made to the parties that were fighting the proposition to give women the franchise in every State in which the question has been submitted to the people.

The Work Women Do

And why should it not be characteristic of women that they should be in politics, as they are, in daily life, always for the uplift, always on the side of sweetness and light? The vast majority of women are good women, filled with noble and altruistic ideals, and trying to help along the world the best they can. It is the women who fill the churches, who organize the philanthropies, who build orphan asylums and old people's homes, who succor the Magdalenes and rescue the drunkards; who, as ladies' aid societies, are the bone and sinew of every good work.

Is it not reasonable, therefore, to believe that women will vote as they club, and that in politics, as in the home, they will stand unwaveringly for the right? For, after all, the ballot simply means that they will have the power to do directly and effectually what they are always trying to do ineffectually through persuasion and entreaties and by the use of the tin sword—that always breaks at the critical moment—called "woman's influence."

The woman with the ballot in her hand does not have to "pray" legislators to inaugurate the reform she wants. She can command it to be done.

As long as men can trust their mothers and wives and sisters always to do the clean thing and the right thing they need not be afraid of what woman will do with the ballot. She'll always be found on the side of righteousness when the votes are counted.

An Antiseptic Millennium

(Little Bit After Kipling)

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

WHEN grocer and butcher and baker mind health laws laid down in a book,
When the cooks who rule in our kitchens wear sterilized gloves when they cook;
When butler, waiter and waitress shall be antiseptically fit,
When at antisepticized tables we shall antiseptically sit,
And eat only pasteurized victuals with sterilized spoons, forks and knives,
And only from pasteurized bottle the tables shall nourish their lives;
When we shall sleep only in bedrooms from bacteria made immune,
And take baths in boiled water only (and be taking more of them soon);
When taxicab seats shall be harmless, and even the street cars be clean;
When Pullman car berths shall be spotless (and porters don't have to be "seen");
When all coined money is polished and the bills are laundered and dried,
When the first microbe is forgotten and the last one discovered has died;
When handshakes shall be sanitary, and kissing shall be made a crime,
When the air before we breathe it shall be "treated" and stored for a time;—
Then those that survive shall be perfect, and glad that they got in the game,
And scientists only shall praise us and scientists only shall blame.
We shall rest, and you bet we'll want to—let up for a whole month or two,
Till the scientists all get together and start us out on something new.

Friend Rebukes Union Labor

From the New York Journal of Commerce.

MR. WILLIAM R. HEARST, in explaining and commenting upon the recent strike of compositors on his two Chicago newspapers, administers a mild but wholesome rebuke to labor unions, of which he has been and still is a conspicuous friend. He tells them and the public that "there is at present a tendency in the labor union movement which should be materially altered or wholly eliminated for the benefit of the movement." This finds expression in "making charges for work that is not actually done," in compelling the employment of a great many more men than are necessary to perform properly a given work," and in "the limitation of production to the capacity of the least productive man." Persistence in these "injurious methods," Mr. Hearst says, "will inevitably weaken the support of the friends of labor unions and materially strengthen the opposition" of their enemies.

This is no new discovery. The tendency and the injurious methods have been often criticised, but the rebuke coming from an ardent defender of organized labor and a sympathizer with many of its demands may be taken to heart by the more intelligent leaders. This friend states pointedly the economic effect of pursuing the methods stigmatized as injurious in diminishing production and reducing the power of employers to pay good wages and improve the conditions of labor. He states the plain truth that good wages, short hours and comfortable conditions depend upon the efficiency of labor, and everything that reduces the efficiency injures both the employer and the workman. The principle should be "good wages for good work," and its corollary must be "good work for good wages."

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

A FRIEND OF THE CHILDREN

Editor AMERICAN:

I have just read your masterly, convincing and splendidly courageous editorial on child-beating.

It will surely strike a note of strong indorsement in the minds, and stir the heart of every true lover of children wherever it is read.

How I wish the sentiments so ably expressed and the terms of the reward—a practical proof of your willingness to back up your statements—might be emblazoned in living letters of fire across the firmament on high; or like the pillar of cloud by day, and fire by night, which led the children of Israel in their escape from Egypt—the TRUTH of the editorial might be ever present with all parents who have the bringing up of children.

I cannot add any weak words of mine to strengthen your argument. It ably covers the ground. I only wish it will be read by every parent who reads the AMERICAN, and not only read once, but reread time and again, and its wise teachings put into daily practice.

I would suggest the publishing of the editorial in pamphlet form for free distribution. It is worth a whole cart-load of the weak and namby-pamby harangues so often heard from our pulpits. By all means publish it again, and yet again! A friend of the children.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG MEN

Editor AMERICAN:

The Boston Public Library has recently placed on its shelves a book entitled "One Way Out." It is written by William Carlton. This story tells of a young married couple, who, although the husband was earning a fair salary, spent all he received. Later he loses his position, and after seeking a position in his regular vocation decides to begin again and moves into a less desirable locality, where his expenses are less, and takes a position with a construction firm at a very low wage. He works his way up and finally goes into business, making a success of his life. It is just the kind of a story that creates enthusiasm and brings courage and hope to the reader. I wish every young man in Boston might read it.

OPPOSES ARMY CANTEEN

Editor AMERICAN:

A frequent reader of your paper, I am most appreciative of your very evident readiness to give fair treatment to both sides of a question. I refer to the army canteen. Read what Brigadier-General A. S. Daggett, U. S. A., has to say about it: "The credit system prevails. The soldier, being out of money, obtains checks on the canteen, presumably for a small part, but actually, in most cases, for a large part of his pay. This debt he is compelled to pay on payday. He receives his money at the pay table and immediately goes to the canteen officer and pays a large part, perhaps all of it, to the canteen. In a few days he is out of money again, and repeats the same process, month after month, during his term of service. He entered the service free from the drink and debt habits. He is discharged with both fixed upon him."
